Life is not all about money

Students should work for love, not loot

Editorial

It is 1965 and Mary can only dream of being a female flight attendant like the beautiful women on television. But Mary must be practical; she knows her place in society and marries young to become a housewife. It is now 1986 and Ken wants to be in a rock band. He practices almost every day with his band but must face the reality that eventually he will have to get his life together. He will have to either learn a trade or go to college to get a degree. After all, like his parents say, he has to be able to make a "stable living."

Since the beginning of time, most people have always tried to work hard to earn a good living. If it means sacrificing their lifelong dreams, they have done it without question. These days, however, should be different. We have learned that whatever we choose to do in life is going to be our life, whether we enjoy it or not. This means we should choose our professions wisely and spend the rest of our lives doing the things that we love.

Students today are becoming more aware of this fact and pursuing careers they will enjoy. More people are going into lower paying professions such as amateur theatre, social work, landscaping, and interior design while fewer are going into formerly high-paying, sought-after professions such as medicine and dentistry. Maybe it is because these jobs require a lot of schooling and are hard work, but unlike generations of the past, students have realized that a high paying profession is not necessarily the best choice if it means working daily on something that is not pleasurable.

In Roosevelt, nearly 60 people out of 1400 students were involved in the Drama Guild this year. This is about five percent of the high school. In the real world, only two percent of the theatre community in the United States is famous actors/actresses. Yet still so many young people venture to show business capitals such as New York City and Los Angeles to pursue their dreams. Knowing that their chances are slim, these young people just want to do what they have always wanted to do: make it big.

Whether "making it big" is driving a semi truck down an open road at dusk, teaching first graders how to read, or being on a Broadway stage, it is doing something that you love to do. It is accomplishing your goals and succeeding in being in a destination that you have worked hard to get to. It is not allowing yourself to give up when your ideas are shot down. It is becoming the person that you have always wanted to be.

Editor's Column:

High school's over, life can begin 'Safety' oftentimes confused with easy

by Amy Rogers

Amazing that four years have passed already, and yet they have moved entirely too slowly. I feel like I should say something about how great my time at RHS was, and some of it was, but some of it was not so there goes the typical inspirational love ya going to miss you column. Sorry to everyone who expects that, it's not really my thing.

That being said, I have decided to just write my column on approaching life. I know a lot of people who are scared to death of leaving home and going away to college. In fact, some people are so frightened that they are attending Kent State University and passing down better offers just to be comfortable. That is their choice, but it seems like a rather wasteful one to me.

Now I understand that sometimes things such as cost and family factor into the equation, but for a lot of people it was just the easy choice. Roughly translated, safety school translates into easy transition for many. This is why I refused to apply at all to Kent State because I knew that come crunch time, it would get awful tempting to just pick KSU, so I did not allow myself the option. Come fall I would have hated myself for it.

I have nothing personal against the university, but I do not see how it possible for me or anyone else to grow by remaining in the same town they grew up in with mommy, daddy, and their friends a simple phone call away. That is not growing up, the way I see it is as extended high school in a new setting. It gets even worse, some people have never been outside of Ohio, and do not intend to; the thought of travel does not intrigue them. This is what I truly find absurd and incomprehensible. Road trips and big cities fascinate me, and any chance I get to travel I jump on it, there is nothing like the thrill of being in a new environment...and if a concert happens to be happening there, all the better.

The Colonel

It is somewhat like the syndrome I discussed in my last editor's column, as children we are told to "broaden our horizons" and "follow our dreams," but somewhere throughout high school these concepts fade and are replaced with demands that we face reality. Facing reality is fine and leads to a more grounded person, but not when it applies to facing the same reality that

*I see you roll your eyes
You know it makes me smile...
I heard the news today
Yeah I know what your friends all say
That I'm gonna go to hell
They are probably right
I just want to go to hell my way
I just want to do it my way
Yes I heard the news today
You are living by the sound of the bell
I still believe that life gets better
When you tell the world to go to hell
Oh I don't want to play your game
I don't want to live that way
I don't want to do what you tell me to do
I don't fit inside the box you've made
No I will never play that game
No I will never live that way
I don't want to do what you tell me to do
I just want to do it my way...
Everybody here in this small town
Looks used and abused at bay
Everybody here's looking outside in
Seems like nothing ever changes
Everybody, they just wanna have a good time
Everybody they just wanna forget
Everybody wants to feel like they did
When the sky looked blue
And the world was perfect
I don't care
I just wanna get lost in the motion
I just wanna get lost in my beautiful self...
I want to get lost from my life sometimes Sit on the side and watch the world go by
I want to get lost in the dark and dream for awhile
Yeah just sit inside a dark room and dream for awhile
The only thing that ever makes sense to me
Is the words to a song from an American movie never take that road. I do not want my future to be one of a married wife with two kids, driving a Volvo. The image makes me want to shoot myself now. To be destined to a life of normalcy is a fate worse than death.

Follow your true ambitions and have some fun being spontaneous... you never know what will happen, and that is the best part. I leave you with, what else, some words from Everclear. (You really didn't think I could graduate without one more reference to them, did ya?) But all kidding aside, take them to heart, and think about what I've said, and then go out and truly live life. You can live life and have a good one without compromising yourself. Good luck. Next time you hear an Everclear song on the radio think of me. I'm done. Bye RHS, catch ya on the flip side.

our parents and those before us have chosen. Maybe they need to face reality that not everybody should want to stay home, and stop tailoring our lives to that idea.

Look at our guidance department, they work very hard, but are pretty much unable to help when it comes to pursuing schools outside of OH. The college materials we received were all tailored to Ohio schools and were of little importance to anyone planning on attending a university out of state. This is a complaint muttered over and over again by the graduating senior classes, yet nothing changes.

Not that I would really expect it to. People tend to hold the mentality that if something is "good enough" then it should not be fixed or challenged. I disagree. Sure it works, but nothing ever advances unless someone works to improve it. If you are fine to stay the same person you have always been, well I guess that works for you, but I find it a waste of life and time.

The world changes, people change, our lives change. Change keeps the world in check. Maybe if people would be more accepting of change and deviance from normal standards, then preconceived notions based on appearances would cease to exist. And maybe if people began to instigate change in their own lives, then they would not be afraid of unfamiliar circumstances. So much good comes from being in an uncomfortable foreign situation that outweighs the temporary uncertainty.

I want to urge my fellow graduating classmates to look outside the box; there is life outside of high school and there is life outside of Kent. Go see it. The easy way is also the most unfulfilling way, and I will

by Lauren Antognoli

Do what you love, love what you do

People have always told me that my high school years would fly by, but I never imagined I would be out of Roosevelt this fast. Looking back at my freshman year, I see how much my class has changed. It seems like just last week we were anxious freshmen, immature and still recovering from middle school. Now we are adults, even if many of us do not act like it. Most of us are trying to decide on a career path; this is a scary idea, seeing that some of RHS's own future professionals still like to TP houses, giggle at bodily functions, and bong beers on the weekends.

Nonetheless, most of us are moving on to college where we will sort out our lives and seek some kind of profession. Sadly, many college students pursue a career that they do not enjoy. I bet that there are med students at any university who hate their major but do it because they want the title and paycheck of a doctor. The same goes for law students, economic majors, and probably any other college-goer. To me, there is nothing worse in life than getting up every day and dreading going to work at a job you loathe.

For all you underclassmen: You do not need to know today what you will do for the rest of your lives. Take the time now to ask yourselves how you want to spend the rest of your lives. What makes you happy? What are your passions? What do you feel makes your life complete? Pursue those things and never stop.

If you are in college studying a subject you cannot stand and your dream in life is to work at Dunkin' Donuts, then by all means, quit school, move out of the dorms, and make as many donuts as your little heart desires. This is obviously just an example, but the idea is the same: do what you love, and love what you do.

It is never too late to look at your life and say, "I am not going where I want to go." Do not be afraid to change your major or path in life. Do not be afraid that you will disappoint your family or friends. Take the initiative to make your life extraordinary.

The following is one of my favorite poems that has inspired me. Hopefully it will inspire you too.

DANCE LIKE NO ONE'S WATCHING

We convince ourselves that life will be better after we get married, have a baby, then another.

Then we are frustrated that we have teenagers to deal with. We will certainly be happy when they are out of that stage.

We tell ourselves that our lives will be complete when our spouse gets his or her act together, when we get a nicer car, when we are able to go on a nice vacation, or when we retire.

The truth is, there's no better time to be happy than right now.

Your life will always be filled with challenges. It is best to admit this to yourself and decide to be happy anyway.

There will always be some obstacle in the way, something to be gotten through first, some unfinished business, time still to be served, or a debt to be paid. Then life would begin.

These obstacles are your life.

This perspective has helped me to see that there is no way to happiness. Happiness is the way.

So treasure every moment you have. Treasure it more because you shared it with someone special enough to spend your time with.

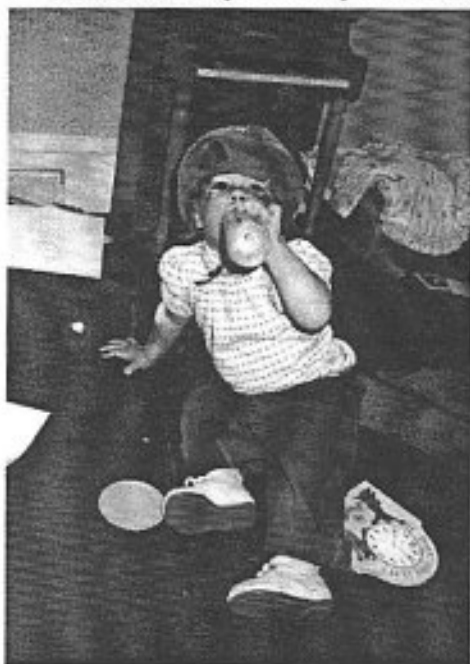

And remember that time waits for no one...

So stop waiting until you finish school, until you go back to school,
until you lose ten pounds,
until you gain ten pounds,
until you have kids,
until your kids leave the house,
until you start work,
until you retire,
until you get married,
until you get divorced,
until Friday night,
until Sunday morning,
until you get a new car or home,
until your car or home is paid off,
until next season,
until you are off welfare,
until the first or the fifteenth,
until your song comes on,
until you have had a drink,
until you sober up,
until you die,
until you are born again.

Decide that there is no better time than right now to be happy.

Work like you don't need the money,
Love like you've never been hurt,
And dance like no one's watching.

RHS faculty wish seniors success

Principal Roger Sidoti

Dear Class of 2003,

As the old saying goes, "It seems like yesterday" that you first entered the halls of Theodore Roosevelt High School. You brought many hopes and dreams with you and yes, a little trepidation. Attending high school was a big deal, another step in your life, and you came in brimming with excitement. I still remember the sheer energy you brought to our building. I remember the first pep assembly and the shocked look of the upper classmen when your class thundered throughout the gym, out yelling everyone and making a statement about your arrival at TRHS!

It is with great pride and affection that I reflect on the many academic accomplishments of this class, but this doesn't begin to tell the whole story. In the spring of your sophomore year I carted you off campus to a little hall and challenged you to make difference in your school, in your community, and in your world. I asked you to use that great energy you possess to make a difference in the lives of others. You exceeded all of my expectations and I am humbled by the extraordinary efforts by many members of the class of 2003 to make Theodore Roosevelt High School a better place for students and staff. You assumed leadership responsibilities with a goal of including everyone in the Roosevelt family. We are a better school and better people because of your dedication and influence. The memories of the class of 2003 will forever cast a warm shadow over our school and our community!

I am absolutely confident that the world will be jolted by the same positive energy we felt just four short years ago. You have been a super class and we were blessed with the opportunity to be part of your lives. Now your journey will continue. I hope you will carry a little TRHS with you wherever you go and be confident that we will be watching in anticipation of the wonderful things you will do to make this world a better place for all. Congratulations and good luck in the future. GO RIDERS!

Roger B. Sidoti
Principal

Guidance Counselor Aaron Carlton

I would like to start by congratulating the Class of 2003 on your outstanding accomplishments and many accolades that you have earned throughout the past thirteen years of your lives. I have been privileged in being assigned to work with you and blessed in getting to know all of you in some way over the past three years. Some of you have spend many hours with me and some have spent few. Some of you I know very well and some I know just a little. Over the years I have spend many hours with the class listening, helping, consoling, disappointing, commending, advising, struggling, laughing, but hopefully impacting what you will take beyond the walls of Theodore Roosevelt. We have made some tough decisions and we have made simple ones. We have agreed, disagreed, and even sometimes we agree to disagree.

These three years have gone by quickly and have left me with quite a few memories as I hope they have left you with some. I am very proud of what each and every one of you has accomplished. I leave you with this parting thought: May everything in life bring you the happiness you deserve and no matter what you face, face it with enthusiasm and a positive attitude.

My very best to the very best—THE CLASS OF 2003!

Aaron Carlton
12th Grade Guidance Counselor

Dean of Students Tom Larkin

Dear Seniors,

Thank you for all the personal memories you are leaving, and all of your contributions to Roosevelt High School. As you spend your final days with us, I have been thinking back on the fun times and the hard times; it certainly has been exciting to say the least. Each of you has contributed to Roosevelt in your own special way.

I hope all of you attack life with the same passion you displayed at Roosevelt. For those of you I taught in class, you may remember "Larkin's Lessons in Life." I would like to give my final lesson;

1. Be thankful for what you DO have, not what you don't have.
2. Smile and treat ALL people with respect.
3. Say, "I love you" to the special people in your life . . . EVERYDAY!

Each of you has so much to offer; live life to the fullest.

Once again, thank you for your contributions. Congratulations on your graduation. I wish you happiness in life, wherever it may take you.

Best Wishes
Tom Larkin

Bridges teacher Cindy Baer

Dear Senior Bridges Students;

You were the first! When you were freshmen, Roosevelt started the Bridges Academy and you enrolled (some willing looking for ways to improve your High School success, some just to check out this new program). You are our risk takers, our program evaluators, our "test market" and it is because of your efforts and input that we have grown and expanded. Thank you for all you have done and always remember the impact that you have had on future students. Good Luck for all of your future endeavors and remember to control and expand your personal power!

With great love and respect;
Mrs. Baer

*Congratulations
Class of 2003!*

Roosevelt's retiring teachers

Thomas, Davis bid farewell to RHS

compiled by Kori Frazier

Deborah Thomas

(photos by Michael Dietz)

Subject Taught at RHS: French II and IV
Number of Years Teaching: 30

When did you first know that you wanted to work in education? Probably when I was a kid and "played school" with my friends!

Where did you attend college and hold previous jobs? I went to Ohio University. I also worked in the summers as a lifeguard and for a few months in retailing.

What is the best experience you have had over the course of your career and why? The moments in class when students "really get it" and hearing my students speaking French freely without prompting. Having two former students who have become French teachers is also very satisfying but getting the chance to teach with them is just tremendous!

What kind of impact do you hope to have had on your students and why? I hope that I have been a positive "moment" in their day and that they understand the importance of following their passions in life.

What will you miss the most about RHS? The students and the energy of youth and my very dear friends on the tremendous staff at RHS!

What will you not miss at all? HOMEWORK!!!

What are your plans for your retirement? I would like to travel, get some pets, and raise lavender—maybe another career! I would also like to become more involved with volunteer work in my community.

What do you see yourself doing in 10 years? Hopefully being a productive member of society and traveling with my husband!

What are your parting words to Roosevelt? En français, s'il vous plaît!

Bill Davis

Subject Taught at RHS: Band
Number of Years Teaching: 35

When did you first know that you wanted to work in education? My junior year of high school. I loved music, particularly instrumental. I wanted to work in band music and education was the way to go!

Where did you attend college and hold previ- ous jobs? I went to Bowling Green State University and graduate school at Youngstown State. Previous jobs—Windham Ex. Village Schools (1968-71, band, all grades), Fremont City Schools (1971-73, band, all grades), Tallmadge City Schools (1973-82, band, all grades and music department chair), Kent City Schools (1982-2003, band, all grades, and instrumental music department chair).

What is the best experience you have had over the course of your career and why? Each and every band performance when I share in the experience of students demonstrating the results of their talent and hard work. In particular, five professional football game performances (two Cleveland Browns, three Washington Redskins) before enthusiastic sellout crowds of 60,000 to 70,000.

What kind of impact do you hope to have had on students and why? I hope students appreciate their accomplishments, as they were pushed to perform at the best of their abilities. I would like to think that every student going through the band program learned the character traits of responsibility, dedication, and grew in their ability to work with others to achieve a common goal.

What will you miss the most about RHS? My relationships with the students and faculty! We have shared a great deal in 21 years—mostly positive!

What will you not miss at all? Trying to negotiate the daily traffic jams to find a parking space and the wind, pain, and cold of late season football games.

What are your plans for your retirement? This will be the first summer in 35 years not filled with marching band preparation and August rehearsals. I will spend the time with family—my wife Jennifer and myself will be traveling to Texas in June and August, as our two daughters will have babies. July will be spent on vacation with our third daughter and grandchildren. Then I will seek reemployment!

What do you see yourself doing in 10 years? Working in areas of interesting and helping family and friends with home remodeling projects. Also increasing my church involvement according to God's direction.

What are your parting words to Roosevelt? Times are changing, but two things remain constant. Students still want to learn and teachers want to teach. Do not abandon the idea that we must continue to work together, supporting and appreciating the efforts of our colleagues. If we don't encourage each other, who will?

Latin students, teachers visit Rome

by John Watson

Over spring break 2003, 44 RHS students and 18 adults, including six RHS teachers, visited the ancient capital of the world: Rome. Latin teacher Rob Susel organized the trip through the RHS Latin Club and the tour company ACIS, but several protests and peace rallies against the war in Iraq distracted students from their trip while in Italy.

When asked how has the war with Iraq affected her trip, biology teacher Denise Risbeck responded, "The war was not a problem. I do not choose to live in fear."

Upon arrival at the Leonardo Da Vinci International Airport, students witnessed a protest directly outside the airport, welcoming them to a new country and in the city of Rome itself, a giant peace rally was held in front of the Pantheon in the center of the city. Protesters waved giant rainbow colored flags with the word "pace," (/pā cha/ Italian for peace) printed on them.

Most of the students and adults were entertained by the protests and rallies; some were completely intrigued.

"I thought their [the protesters] points of view were interesting," senior Lisa Smeiles said.

"They [protesters] most definitely did not [create a negative atmosphere]; they just wanted peace, just like a lot of people from the United States," sophomore Adam Haas said.

Other than watching protests in downtown Rome, the group visited many beautiful sites around Italy, such as the Isle of Capri and the city of Sorrento on the bay of Naples, as well as many ancient Roman structures within the city of Rome.

"Visiting the Colosseum was the best part of the trip; I got to see what Romans did for entertainment," senior Jason McCauley said.

"I really enjoyed the boat ride around the Isle of Capri. We spent one and a half hours circling the island and enjoying the sea air. I hope to keep this a part of future trips; this is one of the most beautiful areas I have ever visited," Susel said.

As well as the ancient capital of the world, Rome is also the center of the Catholic religion. The group visited many old churches around the city, which contained artifacts and artwork up to two centuries old. These artifacts include the remains of many saints, ancient biblical scripts, and paintings done by Michelangelo in the Sistine Chapel.

"I loved visiting the immense chapels, such as St. Peter's Cathedral. They are so beautiful and overpowering," Smeiles said.

A trip of such magnitude did not come without a cost. Each member on the trip had to pay expenses totaling almost $2,000, not including money for souvenirs and lunches.

"The trip was worth every single penny! It was high quality and very enjoyable," Risbeck said.

"You can fly to Rome cheaper, but never experience so many things packed into the 10 day time frame," Latin teacher John Phillips said.

Future Problem Solvers bring victory home to RHS

by Katie Calvin

The Future Problem Solvers (FPS) program began at Roosevelt in 1986. Many of the students who participate in FPS at RHS originally became involved in middle school through the Program for Academic Curriculum Excellence (PACE).

"[In the FPS program, students] use a real-life thinking process to think through obstacles.

The process they learn can be applied to any challenge they might face in life," advisor Kathy Frazier said.

This year the FPS teams participated in the State Bowl tournament hosted at Parma High School on March 28 and 29. Students attending from RHS included seniors Sanjeeb Bose, Pat Jeffers, Morgan Beal, Kori Frazier, and Joseph Bell; sophomores Nathan Kasper and Nick Alexander; and freshmen Michelle Luscre, Katie Williams, Mariam Rahmani, and Robin Scheuerman.

Students separated themselves into groups of three to four people of their choice based on how well the group members work together. Each group was assigned a problem involving a topic that they must solve. Some topics discussed at the bowl were world issues and topics of a health and science nature, along with other various subjects that will affect the future. Once they were assigned a problem, the group worked together to come up with solutions that they could present at state bowl.

When the RHS FPS team arrived in Parma on Friday March 28, they checked into their hotel and left shortly for Parma High School. Upon their arrival, teams from high schools across the state presented their problems to judges. On Saturday March 29, the teams presented their solutions incorporating a box of various items they had never seen before into a five-minute skit.

"[The skit] is the most fun. It's a real test when you are given something that you've never seen before and have to apply it," senior Kori Frazier said.

The skit needed to be performed so that the audience and the judges could understand the problem and its solution while at the same time being entertained.

Later that day awards were given out to many teams. 1st place in Precedence of Action Plan (the skit) was awarded to Bose, Jeffers, Beal, Frazier, and Bell as well as the 3rd Place Problem Solving Team Senior Division; the 1st Place in Individual Competition went to Rahmani; 4th Place Scenario writing to Williams; and Honorable Mentions to Luscre, Rahman, and Bell.

"I was surprised [after our team won first place in the skit]. I didn't expect it," senior Joseph Bell said.

My freshman year honestly feels like yesterday but in reality these four years of high school have made drastic change in which I am. Through the good and bad during the years, thankfully I have only taken away positive thoughts and memories. I've developed my own identity/beliefs and learned that doing your own thing while not following the crowd is key to integrity, individuality and maturity, aspects that I lacked in at first.

Roosevelt being an influential source in my life for the past four years was bound to teach me something for life. As simple as it is, I've learned to have fun in whatever I do while meeting new people with an open mind.

The memories, friendships, and the bumpy, but helpful road through RHS, is without a doubt what I'll be taking with me. For Mrs. Costa and Mrs. Cowan thank you for advising me and for guidance when I needed it, I'll be taking that too!

Underclassmen, the only advice I can think of to leave is, have fun, get involved, stay positive, and skip all your boring pointless classes!

Catie Jurovcik

I'm much more responsible, hardworking and able to understand others. I've learned not to judge people by who they associate with, for when they are in class they are just the same as me. I will take all the friendships, fun and memories.

Don't pick on the kids that are so called "Dorks" for one: someday you might need something from them. Two: they are NO different from you just try to talk to them. Don't mess up and forget about school because in the end that's all you have to fall back on. If you don't have that, you keep falling.

I would like to include a big thanks to Mr. Carlton, for I don't know how he stays sane. Also to all the other teachers that have helped me in the past four years.

Joseph Bell

In 9th grade, I was that funny-looking quiet kid at the back of the class. I had friends, but I was quite shy and rarely attended any extra-curricular activities. My grades weren't that great, neither were my study habits, and missing homework was a common problem of mine. High school was kind of awkward at first, but I began to really "come out of my shell." I began to get involved more and learned that high school can be a great experience. I attended the Leadership Retreat in 12th grade and made memories that will last a lifetime. I starred in the spring play, which was a great experience that I would recommend to anyone, and I'm planning to (at the time of this writing) go to Prom, something that I would never have believed possible before. In high school, I can say that I've grown academically and socially. My grades have improved dramatically and I'm heading towards my desired major in college. I will always look back on my high school years with pride and fondness, despite a little awkwardness in the early years.

My advice for the underclassmen is this: never underestimate your potential. You may not have the best grades or be the most popular, but you have a gift. You have something that you can bring to RHS that nobody else can. Be it through athletic skill, creative talent, or even just a kind smile to someone who's been having a rough day, you can make RHS a great place. I can honestly say that if not for the kindness and support of a bunch of great people, I wouldn't have been able to make the change that I did.

Who knows? Maybe you can be that person or group of people that makes someone's high school years special, by just being there for them, or letting them know that they matter when the world to them seems think otherwise. Meet as many different people as you can. It may mean stepping outside of your comfort zone, but the wonderful friends and new perspectives on the world that you'll gain are invaluable. And finally, join a club or two. High school may seem like something that you want to spend as little time as possible at, but it doesn't have to be that way. Find something that interests you: art, drama, French...anything! You'll make awesome friends and you'll remember the experiences and memories that you'll have for the rest of your life. It's never too late to have a memorable high school experience. Good luck underclassmen! High school can be hard work, it's not easy getting up and heading off to school at 7 AM, but you'll get to spend four years with amazing people.

Teens of the month shine from RHS

by Jamela Dermish

Teen of the month is an honor given to one male and one female in Portage County each month of the school year. The student must shine out among his or her peers and be involved in school and community activities.

To choose a teen of the month, a Teen Board member from each school nominates two students who complete applications. Senior Lauren Antognoli is RHS' Board member. The Board meets, reads each application aloud, and then rates each nominee's activities and achievements. The boy and the girl with the highest average scores win for that month. RHS is home to two of these students: Michael Downey and Amrita Vijayaraghavan. Here is a little insight into the lives of these outstanding students.

MICHAEL DOWNEY DECEMBER

Activities at RHS: Speech and Debate team, Drama Guild, Tennis, NHS president

Other Achievements: Top ten of the class of 2003, National Merit Semi-Finalist

College attending: Northwestern University

College major: Undecided

College activities: "I am not sure yet, but I'm sure I will find something to do!"

AMRITA VIJAYARAGHAVAN MARCH

Activities at RHS: Drama Guild treasurer, Band, Orchestra, Key Club, NHS

Other Achievements: Top ten of the class of 2003, National Merit Semi-Finalist, Thespian

College Attending: Undecided; possibly Amherst College in Amherst, Mass. or Haverford College in Philadelphia

College major: Undecided

College Activities: "I'd like to sing because it was something I never did in high school and continue to play violin."

Michael Downey and Amrita Vijayaraghavan were recently selected as Portage County Teens of the Month.

Secaur, NHS raise money for Bosnian tractor

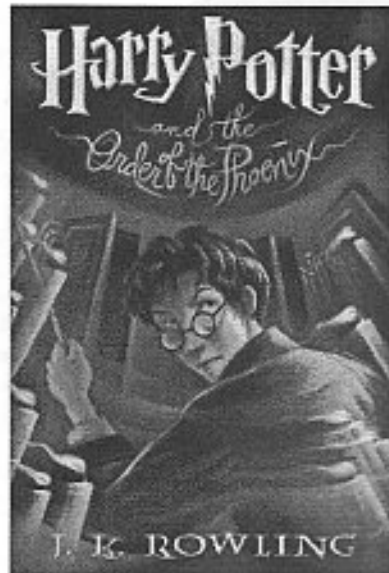

by John Watson

The organization Church World Services' goal is to help people help others. In 1999, Roosevelt physics teacher Jon Secaur participated in this program by raising money for a family in Yugoslavia. Through Church World Services, Secaur helped the Palic family in Bosnia purchase a tractor to aid their agricultural needs. Since helping that family, Secaur has started a new project to raise money for another family in Bosnia, the Osnans, with the support of the RHS National Honor Society (NHS).

About 10 years ago, the country of Bosnia was in the middle of a civil war. The war was fought between Muslim, Roman Catholic, and Orthodox Bosnians. Citizens from Bosnia received persecution from all sides of the war; the effects devastated the entire country.

The Osnan family lives in a small village outside the city of Mostar, a city that suffered greatly from the war and where citizens live in poverty. This particular village is primarily agricultural, and everyone in the village will benefit from the tractor. Church World Services is more than happy to aid this village with their dilemma.

Secaur and NHS members, being familiar with

A presale of the new Harry Potter book is part of Dr. Secaur's fundraising project.

Church World Services, agreed to help any way they could to raise money for the Osnans. As the advisor for NHS, Secaur suggested raising money for this year's community service project to NHS members. Over the 2002 Christmas season, NHS members sold holiday donation cards to friends and family.

In April, the Scholastic publishing company agreed to donate to the cause by offering 25 percent of its profits in the pre-sale of the newest Harry Potter book, Order of the Phoenix. On May 29 and 30, Scholastic will also be holding a sale with more of their catalog choices at RHS.

The cost of providing a tractor to this family will be around $3800. A generous donor in the Kent community has proposed to match whatever donations are made through NHS and Key Club fundraising. This means that in order to reach their goal, NHS and Key Club need only raise $1900 to send the tractor to the Osnans.

By the end of this school year, NHS hopes to have raised all the money needed to purchase a tractor and send it to the Osnan family. The tractor they receive will not only help the family prosper, but the whole community around them will benefit from the gift.

What is your favorite thing about the United States?

Sports at school.

What is the weirdest thing you found in or about the U.S.?

The punks at school.

What will you miss most about your stay here?

Friends and family.

What is your best memory from the U.S.?

Relationship with my family.

What are some major differences between the U.S. and your home country?

School is easier, with lots of [fun] classes. Food, people.

What are your final goodbyes?

Goodbye!

Kim Eriksson-Sweden:

Hosted by David,
Stacy, and
Tom Yaniglos

What is your favorite thing about the United States?

One of them is definitely being able to play sports for your school (in Sweden we play with club teams). But also that you got the National Hockey League here!

What is the weirdest thing you found in or about the U.S.?

That people eat peanut butter and jelly sandwiches, that tax is excluded from the price, and that you open the toilet doors by pulling instead of pushing. This results in a wrestling game every time you try to get out.

What is the strangest food you tried?

A veggie pizza that someone made as a demonstration speech in Public Speaking class. Ugh! It was so bad! I sure hope Mrs. Costa failed them because it was BAD STUFF!

What will you miss the most about your stay here?

I'll miss my host parents David and Stacy, and my host brother Tom. Alberto "who is me," Vincent "of course yeah," Gil, "It's all me baby," Robbie "McGuyver" and a ton of other people as well as my dear and beloved CHIPOTLE!

What is your best memory from the U.S.?

I've got a lot of 'em: watching my first NHL game, being given the opportunity to interview some Pittsburgh Penguins players, going to New York, and being able to play for the RHS hockey team!

What are some major differences between the U.S. and your home country?

The U.S. is more strict than Sweden. The school is like a prison because of the rules. Adjusting to the strict society has been tough for me.

What are your final goodbyes?

I just want to thank everybody for making this the best year of my life! It has been awesome! Also I would like to say that our hockey fans this year were awesome, it sounded like there were a thousand of them sometimes! Go riders!

Naoki Kobayashi-Japan: Hosted by Maxine, James, Trevor, and Keagan O'Mara

What is your favorite thing about the United States?

Club activities, snowboarding, and tennis.

What is the weirdest thing you found in or about the U.S.?

Americans don't eat as much seafood. I love shrimp, squid, octopus, fish and seaweed, so it's weird.

What is the strangest food you tried?

Deer, it's not so strange though. I ate deer for the first time in my life. I guess I will never think that I want to eat deer again; it's not bad tasting, though.

What will you miss the most about your stay here?

All the people I met.

What is your best memory from the U.S.?

People.

What are your final goodbyes?

Goodbye.

Alejandra Benza-Paraguay: Hosted by Robert, Joyce, and Hillary Lovell

What is your favorite thing about the United States?

That there are so many different ethnicities, and being able to see their differences and similarities.

What is the weirdest thing you found in or about the U.S.?

The way people get upset because they think we call Americans stupid when they are the ones who keep saying Americans are all stupid and aren't educated.

leave of Kent, Roosevelt

What is the strangest food you tried?

Buffalo meat.

What will you miss the most about your stay here?

How easy school was! The friends that I've made.

What is your best memory of the U.S.?

Meeting all the people that I've met, and making awesome friends.

What are some major differences between the U.S. and your home country?

The people and the way they behave. I don't think there is a lot I could say; there is a lot of differences because at the same time they are similar.

What are your final goodbyes?

Rach: I'll miss you like mierda! But we will see each other soon. Yeow.

Lovells: thanks for everything. I had a great time. RHS: you guys are awesome

Vincent Winterberger- France: Hosted by Dick, Kim, and Lena Richards

What is your favorite thing about the United States?

The school, the sports and fast food.

What is the weirdest thing you found in or about the U.S.?

The fast food and how people drive.

What is the strangest food you tried?

Chile.

What will you miss the most about your stay here?

My family, my friends, and sports

What is your best memory of the U.S.?

Playing sports, the relationship with a new family, and living with Lena and Anna.

What are some major differences between the U.S. and your home country?

The school, fast food, sports, people, the weather, the girls.

What are your final goodbyes?

Goodbye! There are so many, I don't know.

Gil Multhaupt- Germany:

Hosted by Kevin and Robin Larson

What is your favorite thing about the United States?

The fast food- especially Chipotle!

What is the weirdest thing you found in or about the U.S.?

Sports are so big and important here; it's not like that in Germany.

What is the strangest food you tried?

There really isn't anything I tried that was strange, there are a lot of different foods, but they aren't strange.

What will you miss the most about your stay here?

The Colonel

I will miss all of my friends the most and everyone I met.

What is your best memory of the U.S.?

My best memory is playing basketball with the team.

What are some major differences between the U.S. and your home country?

We don't use cars so much in Germany. We have good public transportation, and everyone uses that.

What are your final goodbyes?

I would like to say goodbye to everyone who knows me and all of my friends.

Ayae Yamauchi- Japan: Hosted by John and Jane Gwinn

What is your favorite thing about the United States?

We can do whatever we want and the teachers are nice. Relationships are closer, friends are nice. In Japan there is some discrimination; we call everyone who is not from Japan a foreigner but in America everyone can be together.

What is the weirdest thing you found in or about the U.S.?

That girls hug each other, because we don't have that [in our] culture.

What is the strangest food you tried?

American food is not strange, but most Americans don't eat Japanese food.

What will you miss the most about your stay here?

I think my friends and family and school too, I think, and English.

What is your best memory of the U.S.?

My friends, and the swim team; I am glad to have been on the swim team.

What are some major differences between the U.S. and your home country?

School is easier! Taxicabs are different, and Americans drive on the right side of the road.

What are your final goodbyes?

I love all of my friends and I am glad to have met you guys and I hope we can meet again!

TOP

compiled by Emily White

Valedictorian Sanjeeb Bose

Where are you going to college? California Institute of Technology
What is your intended major? Aerospace/ Astronomical Engineering
Who influenced you greatly in high school? Dr. Secaur, Mrs. Cikra, and sadly, Patrick Cruce (see for reference my attendance record).
What is your favorite memory from high school? Well, there was that one time... in the physics back room... 2000 volts and a bad experience with the Geiger counter. Most memorable at least.
What your favorite cafeteria food? Fasting is a far better idea.
Do you have some insightful advice to underclassmen? Insightful? Hardly. But I ask that everyone make time for his or her own happiness.
What will you miss most or least from RHS? Most: probably just the ability to relax. Least: meaningless homework that just eats at my time.

Salutatorian Pat Jeffers

Where are you going to college? Case Western Reserve University
What is your intended major? Environmental Engineering
Who influenced you greatly in high school? My parents were there for me in everything and motivated me to do my best. Mr. Cowan and Mr. Foreman taught me to think in depth and provided for many great experiences. Dr. Secaur helped me discover a love for physics. Also Mr. Richards has helped me along the path of obtaining a career I can enjoy. Thank you all.

What is your favorite memory from high school? Enjoying a sunny day at the start of the Appalachian Trail in Amicalola Falls, Georgia. Also, wrestling on the top of Roan Mountain in North Carolina.

What was your favorite cafeteria food? Everything! Anything looks good after wrestling season.

Do you have some insightful advice to underclassmen? Take advantage of what this school has to offer. There are so many sports and activities and classes that will make for memorable experiences. Plus all of the teachers are more than willing to put forth extra help if you let them.

What will you miss most or least from RHS? The wrestling team, you guys are like family to me.

(in alphabetical order)

Jason Craig

Where are you going to college? Kent State University

What is your intended major? Undecided

Who influenced you greatly in high school? My parents for never accepting less than my best but for never pushing me too hard to get there. Mrs. Danko and Mrs. Cikra for teaching me about hard work, and Mr. Dzeda for evoking obedience and thought.

What is your favorite memory from high school? It will probably be graduation. What was your favorite cafeteria food? Waffle fries, grilled cheese, and macaroni and cheese... despite its traditional bad reputation, cafeteria food really isn't so bad.

Do you have some insightful advice to underclassmen? "Live right now. Just be yourself. It doesn't matter if it's good enough for someone else." -Jimmy Eat World

What will you miss most or least from RHS? Most: Snow days. Least: busy work, warm water from drinking fountains.

Michael Downey

Where are you going to college? Northwestern University

What is your intended major? Undecided; probably mathematics or Poli-Sci

Who influenced you greatly in high school? My teachers: thanks! You've all changed my life.

What is your favorite memory from high school? I have lots of favorites, but if I had to pick it would be when Mr. Dzeda made fun of Lauren Antognoli the first day of my freshmen year.

What your favorite cafeteria food? Rough Rider burgers

Do you have some insightful advice to underclassmen? If you wait until the last minute, it can't take very long.

What will you miss most or least from RHS? I will miss all of the friends that I've known for most of my life and will rarely see anymore.

Kori Frazier

Where are you going to college? Ohio Northern University

What is your intended major? Major in Creative Writing with a minor in Professional Writing

Who influenced you greatly in high school? Mrs. Danks, Mr. Dzeda, and Mrs. Cakra for encouraging my love of learning and writing and being great role models for me.

What is your favorite memory from high school? Qualifying for states in Speech my sophomore year. I gave so much time and hard work to our team that year and to be recognized in front of my fellow competitors and some of the most prominent coaches in the district was an experience I will never forget!

What was your favorite cafeteria food? The salad bar... especially the pasta!

Do you have some insightful advice to underclassmen? Never EVER, sell yourself short. If someone had told me my freshman year that I would graduate top 10 in my class, I never would have believed it. It took me a long time to realize what I am truly capable of achieving. Everyone is capable of doing amazing things with their lives and no one is an exception. If you think that you can't do something, don't believe it... there is a good chance that you probably can.

What will you miss most or least from RHS? Most: Speech and Debate, The Colonel, and my amazing teachers. Least: the social politics of high school and pointless busy work.

Stephanie Ingram

Where are you going to college? Columbus College of Art and Design

What is your intended major? Illustration and Graphic Design

Who influenced you greatly in high school? All the teachers I've sought approval from: Mrs. Atkins, Mrs. Costa, and Mrs. Danks especially. All the teachers I can laugh with and learn from. And my father, I guess... he is helping to pay for college after all.

What is your favorite memory from high school? I plead the fifth on the grounds that my favorite memory might incriminate me.

What was your favorite cafeteria food? My freshman year they served the greatest bagel sandwiches. Tuna, egg salad, you name it. With fresh vegetables included. Those were great. Sadly, by the end of sophomore year they were gone.

Do you have some insightful advice to underclassmen? Insightful? Probably not. Go to the POPS Concert every year. Take at least one art class, no how matter how awful you think your stick figures are. Read Allen Ginsburg's "Howl." Wander around town during the summer with no destination. Four years isn't forever because forever is much, much longer.

What will you miss most or least from RHS? I think I can live without the parking lot in the morning.

Lisa Smeiles

Where are you going to college? Messiah College

What is your intended major? Nursing

Who influenced you greatly in high school? My parents encouraged me through all of the long hours of homework as well as the stress that comes with high school. They are definitely my greatest influences not only in school but in my life also.

What is your favorite memory from high school? I will never forget the time I totally "bit it" (tripped) right in the middle of the hallway my freshmen year and a cute senior guy helped me up.

What was your favorite cafeteria food? I never ate very much of the cafeteria food since I prefer to pack my lunch.

Do you have some insightful advice to underclassmen? Do not forget to have fun in high school. Make sure you don't get stuck in all of the stress and homework.

What will you miss most or least from RHS? I will miss all of my friends so much and all of the crazy things we do together. You girls are the best!

Tim Szweda

Where are you going to college? Ohio State University

What is your intended major? Engineering

Who influenced you greatly in high school? My family.

What is your favorite memory from high school? Going to Utah with D.E.C.A.- Yeehaw!

What your favorite cafeteria food? Mashed potatoes... mmmmm...

Do you have some insightful advice to underclassmen? Just say no.

What will you miss most or least from RHS? Least: getting to school by 7:35. Most: All of the awesome friendly people.

Amrita Vijayaraghavan

Where are you going to college? Either Haverford or Amherst College.

What is your intended major? I am undecided but thinking about either a science major or film direction (a.k.a. waitressing 101).

Who influenced you greatly in high school? Nearly all my teachers from my junior and senior year, my sister, and my friends.

What is your favorite memory from high school? Probably the time Rachel Marken and I had a tea party...

What your favorite cafeteria food? Those vaguely addictive, 25 cent granola bars- the price is right.

Do you have some insightful advice to underclassmen? Yes.

What will you miss most or least from RHS? One of the things I will miss is doing drama at Roosevelt.

Emily Wheeler

Where are you going to college? Skidmore College

What is your intended major? Undecided... any suggestions?

Who influenced you greatly in high school? Big sis & little bro for congratulating me on not failing out of school... yeah, thanks. And to all my many friends (many?), thank you for your continuous encouragement, or something like it. Oh yes, parents too. You are wonderful.

What is your favorite memory from high school? Well orchestra, of course. The rest is just a blur...

What your favorite cafeteria food? Clearly the only logical answer here is macaroni and cheese... yum.

Do you have some insightful advice to underclassmen? Insightful? Not particularly. But here goes: Hard work is overrated, really. Why can't we just enjoy life?

What will you miss most or least from RHS? Least: side walks never being salted in the winter, waking up rather early to either: out of tune cellos or the French language being questioned by overly loud librarians, living the same routine over and over, and after school detentions (as fun as they were).

Most: teachers that sympathize with my continuous procrastination, that feeling of life being frozen in high school forever, being late nearly every day over the course of four years, heated classroom debates, and learning. It's been a good four years!

College roommate horror stories

by Lauren Antognoli

A plethora of new experiences accompanies one's freshman year of college: dorms, classes, and more freedom are just a few. But one of the biggest changes is sharing living quarters with a total stranger. Having a roommate can be a positive experience, but once in awhile, one gets stuck with a roomie who is rude, messy, or just plain nuts. The following are the worst true college roommate horror stories.

Jen Keller graduated from Field High School in 2000 and entered Ohio State University that fall. Her freshman roommate was the ultimate nightmare.

"It all started when she tried to do everything I was doing," Keller said. "One day I got my hair cut, and the next day she got her hair cut exactly like mine. She would ask me to go shopping with her, but the next day she'd go back to the mall and buy the same things I had bought the day before."

Unfortunately, Keller's situation did not improve as the year went on.

"Things blew up and it got worse and worse," she said. "She got into my computer and erased a bunch of stuff then denied she did it. At one point, she claimed she had this sleeping disorder. She went to like 10 doctors, but none of them could find anything wrong with her. She started staying up all night then went to bed when I got up for class every day. She would sleep all day long and never go to class."

Needless to say, Keller does not speak with her ex-roomie anymore.

Kyla Springer, a 2000 RHS graduate, attends American University in Washington DC. She recalled a roommate who was less than ideal.

"She was crazy," Springer said. "She had about four alarm clocks and she would set them all 20 minutes apart. They would all go off starting at five or six in the morning and ring for half an hour each!"

Not only did the clocks make a racket, but Springer's roommate was an opera major.

"She would constantly sing in the room," Springer said. "And she would make me watch her opera videos! She was weird, kind of a 'Martha Stewart type.' But she hit on everyone in the halls."

Kent State student Ashley Ellrich graduated from RHS in 2002. She lived in a quad with three other girls, but not for long. Problems began when the girls moved in the day after Ellrich did.

"When I returned [to the dorm] on Saturday, I found my bedspread was taken off my bed and was lying on the floor along with my clothes and my computer. One of my new roommates told me that she liked where my stuff was so she decided to take my closet, bed, and desk," she said. "I had to move all my stuff to a tiny little spot they left me in the corner of the room."

Rude Roommate #1 would smoke in the room despite Ellrich's polite pleas not to.

"She flat out told me no because she said that in the winter she wouldn't go outside to smoke because it's too cold, so she might as well smoke inside when it's warm," she said. That same day, Rude Roommate #2 crossed the line.

"Rude Roommate #2 informed us all that her boyfriend would be visiting that night and she would appreciate it if we found somewhere else to stay," Ellrich said. "I just went home, but the other girls spent that night in the hallway."

When Ellrich woke up for class on Monday, she found a rather unpleasant surprise.

"I opened my closet to find that all my clothes were on the floor and the hangers were missing," she said. "I was then informed that

"Rude Roommate #2" didn't bring hangers and she figured that since I was from around here it would be easier for me to get more hangers than for her to get any at all."

Ellrich tried to remain calm, but yet another problem drove her out of the dorm for good.

"After class one day my Resident Advisor was waiting for me in my room with a list of questions to ask me about the case of beer in my closet," Ellrich said. "Rude Roommate #1 thought it was okay to hide beer in my closet because if I got caught and got kicked out of the dorms, I could just live at home but still go to Kent State, whereas she would have to go home."

Disgusted and fed up with her roomies, Ellrich packed her bags and moved back home. She explained the situation to Kent State, but was still forced to pay room and board for the rest of the year.

Mike Antognoli, a 2000 RHS graduate, is a junior at the University of Toledo. Nothing could have prepared him for his first roommate.

"First of all, he put ballet posters on the walls," Antognoli explained. "He was obsessed with the Backstreet Boys and would tape their music videos off of VH1."

Antognoli recalled his roomie's habits.

"He would be tap dancing when I woke up," he said. "And he slept with his headphones on, so when his alarm clock went off in the morning he would never hear it. I'd have a scream at him to get up and turn off his alarm."

Antognoli soon moved out, leaving the tap dancing fool behind.

Sure, these stories may sound funny (and disturbing), but it may be too soon to laugh. You may very well be the next to experience an infamous horrible roommate.

HOW TO COPE WITH THE ROOMMATE FROM HELL

- Wear earplugs. If your roommate listens to bad music or has a voice like Fran Drescher, stick in some earplugs to block out the noise.
Example: "Hey Joey, let's listen to my Michael Bolton CD again." Joey runs for his earplugs.
- Study somewhere else. Is your roomie's terrible snoring keeping you from hitting the books? Trek to a location where silence is golden.
Example: Linda needs to study for her chemistry exam, but her roommate Fran is watching Mr. Ed reruns and laughing like a hyena in heat. Linda grabs her backpack and heads for the library.
- Get a new roommate. If the situation is that bad, talk to your college counselor about a room reassignment. Make sure to describe in detail the horrific conditions.
Example: "I woke up and Mary had ripped my clothes to shreds with a knife and put a dead squirrel on the dresser. I cannot live in that kind of environment!"
- Drop a hint. If your roomie tends to avoid any kind of personal hygiene, offer him or her your deodorant (and let them keep it). If all else fails, be honest and tell them that they need to shower.
Example: "Nick, do you smell something? I do - it is your armpits. Please wash yourself."
- Be strong. Psycho roommates can be pretty scary, but be confident and aggressive when confronting them about conflict.
Example: "Jenny, it really bothers me when you burn the curtains. You need to stop!"
- Get even. Give your wicked roomie a taste of his own medicine by topping the aggravation scale tenfold.
Example: Terrell likes to leave half-eaten food around the dorm room, which causes a nasty infestation of ants. His frustrated roommate Walter gets even by placing scorpions in Terrell's bed.

Staying safe on campus

by Amy Rogers

For many students, college will be the first time they are away from home and on their own. Thus, personal safety becomes a highly relevant issue. Here are a few safety tips to make living away from home a little less frightening.

Check out your college's safety brochures: Many colleges offer chaperone services to students who have to travel after dark. Others have transportation services provided for the sole purpose of night traveling. In addition, many campuses located in cities have emergency boxes and/or phone boxes within a half a mile of each other for use if one feels in danger or apprehensive of his or her surroundings. Most campuses also have their own police squads for the protection of students.

Travel with a companion: Although it is not always possible, it is advisable in unfamiliar surroundings or larger cities that one travels with a companion. As they say, safety in numbers. You are less likely to be bothered if you are with a group or friend, whereas alone you become an easier target. If you must travel alone, let someone know where you are going at all times. In the unfortunate case something should happen, this will make it easier for help to find you.

Be alert and aware of your surroundings: By knowing where you are and what surrounds you, it will be easier to defend yourself or seek help in case of an attack. If a dangerous situation should arise, familiarity will allow you to be able to run to a nearby open business for safety. Alertness will decrease the chance of being caught off guard. Walk purposefully; confidence deters attackers. Remember to look behind you occasionally and never use headphones because they close off the world around you.

Avoid dark, vacant or deserted areas; use well-lit, traveled routes: The more people around you, the less the chances are that you will be attacked. Deserted areas make you a target for thieves and/or potential assailants.

Wear comfortable clothes that will not hamper movement: Should a questionable situation arise, this will allow you to quickly remove yourself from danger.

Carry pepper spray: Although it may seem like going a bit overboard, pepper spray is available for less than 2 dollars at most drug stores. It usually comes in a small container that will easily fit into one's purse or pocket. If attacked, spray it in the assailant's eyes so you can to escape unharmed. Chances are slim that this type of situation will occur, but it never hurts to be prepared. However, it should be noted that pepper spray is quite irritating to the eyes and face and should not be used in a haphazard manner on friends or your roommate as a joke when he or she comes stumbling in late at night.

Always carry change and/or a phone card: With one of these items, you can call a friend, taxi, or family member if you are stranded or nervous. After dialing, turn your back to the phone and speak looking outwards at your surroundings.

If you drive, always check the car before entering: When approaching your vehicle, carry your keys in your palm with a key facing outwards between two fingers so that it can be used to jab someone should the need occur. Also, always have your keys out and ready so that you do not have to fumble around for them outside the door. Before getting into your vehicle, take a quick look to make sure there is no one hiding in the backseat and/or passenger seat. Although this may seem like a terrifying idea, being surprised by an intruder would be even more terrifying and life threatening.

HELPFUL HINTS TO DETER THEFT

Another prevalent problem across the country on college campuses is that of thievery and vandalism. Unfortunately, many students who lack money instead of making due like others, choose to victimize those with items they themselves want. Here are a few tips to help make sure that your items remain safe.

- Since textbooks are expensive and a common need for students, they are often stolen. To protect yours, write a number such as the date of your birthday or driver's license number on random pages inside of them. This way, if your textbooks are stolen from you, you now have a way of identifying them as your own should you discover who the thief was or if you find a stolen textbook in a used textbook store.
- Always keep an eye on your possessions such as a purse or backpack. Leaving any item unattended makes it an open invitation for a thief. A good way to keep a carry able item secure is to keep a strap wrapped around your arm or lower leg (when seated), thus if someone attempts to grab the item, you will feel the tug and be able to prevent the theft.
- If you drive, keep car doors locked at all times and be sure not to leave the windows down. Although this may lead to a very stuffy car on warm spring days, it is a sacrifice that will be rewarded every time you return to find your car exactly where you left it, untouched with your possessions safely inside.
- Always lock your dorm room when you leave and make sure your roommate does too. Many people live in the same dorms as you and chances are that there may be one resident who is less than trustworthy. Leaving your door unlocked is like asking someone to help him or herself to your belongings.

What to bring when you can't bring mom Dorm decor to spice up rooms

by Abby Stiegemeier

A college dorm room can look like something out of a psychiatric ward; the concrete block walls and tile floors are not very inviting to students in the fall. However, there are many ways to make a dorm room look and feel as comfortable as bedrooms back home.

It all starts with the layout of the room. Before decorating, decide how you want the beds positioned. Some people decide to keep the beds bunked in order to save space, but lofting each bed can create even more space. To loft a bed, simply debunk it from the other bed, leaving the legs high enough so that room for a desk can be placed underneath it. When the desk is under the bed, something else can take the new space.

After situating the space to your liking, start making the room your own. Necessities are as follows:

The Basics

1. A floor rug: This is a smart idea considering that dorms can get cold, especially if they have wood or tile floors. The rug creates warmth as well as comfort for any visitor who may be sleeping on the floor.

2. Bed sheets/pillow cases/comforter: Of course bed sheets are needed in order to stay warm. But bed sets can also be fun to shop for, especially if you want your room to have a theme. Remember: flannel sheets in the winter and linen in the spring!

3. Clothes: Remember that most dorm room closets consist of tiny cubicles with ridiculous measurements. You will not have the luxury of having a closet plus multiple dressers like you have at home. Choose comfortable, warm clothes that can be worn multiple times before being laundered, since washing clothes will become a pain. Hooded sweatshirts and pajama pants will be your best bet!

4. Clothes hamper: This inexpensive item will eliminate the clutter of clothes on the floor and make it easy for you to take dirty clothes to the laundry room, wherever it is located in your dorm.

5. Medicine: The worst thing next to a psycho roommate is getting sick at school and not having medication to help. Over the counter drugs like Tylenol and Advil are lifesavers in the time of a bad headache. Also remember band-aids and peroxide.

6. Alarm clock: Since Mommy and Daddy will not be there to roll you out of bed in the morning, an alarm clock becomes your best friend, especially when a big test or final is coming up.

7. Sandals: If you want athlete's foot, ignore this item, but for the rest of the germophobic community, shower sandals are a must. You will be sharing a shower with many different people who might not be as clean as you are.

8. Microwave: Unfortunately, home cooked meals will not be available at college, but TV dinners will! Just pop virtually anything into the microwave and you will have delicious food within seconds! (Many colleges do not allow microwaves in individual dorm rooms, so be sure to check with your college before you buy one.)

9. Cordless phone: Most colleges provide each dorm room with one out-of-date phone. Cordless phones are nice so you can walk around your dorm with it while tending to other things.

10. Computer: Obviously, a computer is needed to do virtually everything for your classes. For one, professors will not accept hand-written papers. Most dorm rooms today have Internet connection in each individual dorm room. Libraries have computers for students, but having your own always guarantees you an open spot to print something out or just chat online with friends.

11. Storage boxes: Since dorm room closets are a joke, storage boxes allow extra space for more clothes, shoes, and coats that have nowhere else to go. These handy items can also hide personal things that you might not want your sneaky roommate's eyes on.

12. Shower Caddy: Unfortunately, you will be forced to share a bathroom with anywhere from 12-20 people, depending on how many students are on your floor. A shower caddy makes walking to the bathroom easier, so that half of your toiletries will not fall all over the hallway. It also keeps your belongings together so you will not get them mixed up in your crowded room. Towels are also a must!

Decorations

1. Pictures: Photos of friends and family are a necessity. For the first time you will be away from them for long periods of time. Being able to look at them every day in photos is the next best thing to actually being with them. Cute frames also add color to a room. New friends coming into your room will be able to learn a lot about you through your pictures.

2. Christmas lights: Since candles are forbidden in dorms, Christmas lights or other festive decorative lights give a dorm room a new atmosphere.

3. Dry Erase board: This is a great addition to your dorm room door, allowing other students who pass by to write anything on it that they want.

4. Television: Even though finding time to watch TV will be seldom, you can always have it to keep up on what is happening outside your college community, besides some night you may just want to stay in and watch a movie.

5. Stereo: A necessity for some, decoration for others. Whatever your preference, music is a big part of college life. It is hard to imagine a dorm room without a stereo, considering that the sound of music can be heard down the hall in virtually every college dorm room. This includes cases of CD's too.

6. Mirror: This one might be directed toward guys more than girls, but having a mirror in your room eliminates the hassle of walking all the way to the bathroom just to get something out of your eye, or just to see how you look.

No more sleeping in; get a job

Earn some money this summer

by Azka Khan

With summer fun on every student's mind, it might not be the best time to bring up the topic of summer jobs. However when, facing reality some students might want to take a look at this compilation of summer job opportunities. Remember to take into consideration that there are many jobs available that might not be listed here.

Aurora Farms:

There are many job opportunities available here such as these stores: Adidas, Zales (18+), Dress Barn, Totes, Bonworth, Jockey (18+), Carters (18+), Easy Spirit, Wilson's Leather, Pfaltzgraff, and Welcome Home. Other than the stores indicated for age 18 or older, one must be 16 years old. Please contact the individual stores for further information.

Wendy's:

Wendy's is hiring crewmembers, cashiers, servers, and cleaners. All who are applying should be age 16 or up. Call: 330-673-1326 for further information.

Chipotle:

Chipotle is hiring people to work the "line" in the front of the store. Hiring age 16 and up only. For more information call: 330-673-9665

Taco Bell:

Taco Bell is hiring new crew members. To apply call: 330-678-2924

Country Kitchen:

Country Kitchen is seeking servers and cooks age 16 and up. Please call: 330-673-0222

Chapel Hill Mall:

Job opportunities are available at many stores and note that all might not be listed here. Stores hiring, as of now, are Aeropostale, Amish Valley, Buckle, Bath and Body Works, Deb/Deb Plus, Express, Finish Line, Lane Bryant, Wilson's Leather, and Zales. Please call any store listed here or any other store in the mall that you may be interested in or go to www.chapelhillmall.com, for further information.

Kent Free Library:

Although there are no job openings at the moment, manager Wendy Bartlett encourages all students who wish to work at the library to come and fill out an application. The only position available is the "paging position," which entails shelving books, putting items away, cleaning up and keeping sections in order. For any questions, or more information call: 330-673-4414

Acme in Stow:

Steve Albright, manager, is willing to take in many applications since college is not out and at the moment he is unaware of the college students he will be losing. Call: 330-678-1535

Target:

The store is only hiring people known as the "flow" team to work in the back room and unload the trucks. This job requires working in the early morning hours and one is required to be 18 years or older. If interested call: 330-688-5928

Six Flags:

One of the busiest locations in northeast Ohio has plenty of job opportunities for this summer. They are hiring in the following positions: ride operations, food service, water attractions operators, parking lot, jobs in surrounding hotels, the park's health service, security, merchandise vendors, games, camp ground, park service, admission, and cash control. One must fill out applications in person and must be 16 years of age or older. For any more information about working at Six Flags call: 330-562-4400

Now that you have a head start for making money this summer, you might as well get to it. Keep in mind this summer could be the best or worst summer of your life and a big impact could be from where you decide to work. Call any of this potential employers and any other employer that you wish to work for, knowing that it is a good thing to just fill out an application even if the place is not hiring. Eventually they will need people to work for them and it just might be you!

When dieting is not enough Eating healthy not as hard as it seems

by Kristen Salamon

With all of the sports, clubs, jobs, and school activities that teenagers are involved in, eating right is often the last thing on their minds. But according to Marge Novi, a registered dietician at the Cleveland Clinic Foundation, healthy eating on the go is not as hard as it seems.

"It isn't really that hard. It does take more planning, but it is not too difficult," Novi said.

According to Novi, healthy eating is as simple as planning ahead. For example, if you are going to be gone all day, throw healthy snacks like fruit or granola bars into your bag instead of money for the vending machines after school.

"It just depends on your self-discipline," senior Morgan Beal said. "It is just as easy to go to your house and grab some carrots and dressing as it is to go to a fast food restaurant."

"I pretty much always eat three meals a day and I always pack my lunch so I don't have to buy from the cafeteria," junior Alyssa Janoso said.

According to Novi, eating three meals daily is definitely beneficial to teens. Teens who eat three meals a day tend to have more energy and tend to be leaner than teens who skip meals on a regular basis.

"Eating three meals a day helps keep your metabolism going," Novi said.

People who eat three meals a day are more alert and have more energy throughout the day.

It has also been found that people who eat three meals a day are more alert and have more energy throughout the day. But according to senior Sanjeeb Bose, skipping breakfast has not affected him.

"It hasn't really bothered me; I never eat breakfast," he said.

When teens run from activity to practice and then to another activity, fast food restaurants are often the easiest way to satisfy their growling stomachs. This presents a problem for teens who are trying to eat healthy. When it comes to fast food restaurants, Novi advises teenagers to choose healthier items.

"So instead of the fried chicken sandwich, get a grilled one. Also, avoid sizing items," Novi said.

Everybody has heard of the food pyramid at some point in their life, and obviously Novi is no exception.

"The most important thing for teenagers to remember is to include food from all of the food groups," Novi said.

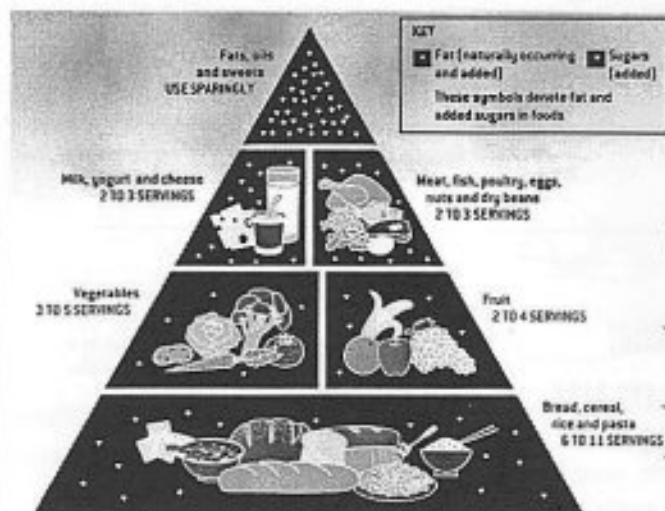

For many teenagers the food groups consist of chips, soda, and pizza. These are not the food groups Novi is speaking of. The real food groups include bread, cereal, rice, and pasta, fruits, vegetables, meat, poultry, fish, dairy products, and fats and oils.

Trying to eat healthy as a teen is not as difficult as it seems. Plan ahead, eat three meals a day, and avoiding empty calories will help create a healthier breed of teenagers.

New, improved Healthy Eating Pyramid

At the Harvard School of Public Health, Dr. Walter Willet and his colleagues are working to redesign the current food pyramid and replace it with the so-called "Healthy Eating Pyramid." This new design redivides the amount and type of foods considered healthy and also breaks up a few of the original categories into more specific groups. For example, the category that was once the breads, cereals, rice and pastas of the carbohydrate category are now split into two groups. Group one is located at the top of the pyramid and consists of white bread, white rice, potatoes, and sweet potatoes, while group two includes whole grain foods and is located near the bottom of the pyramid.

Take a hike!

Where to go for nature, solitude

by Austin Kotting

Summer in Kent. An idyllic season to be sure, but what to do with all the time? Work, parties, television, reading, and vacations never seem to occupy the whole season, and in any case they become boring. Clearly, a solution is needed. Why not have a walk in the woods?

In the Kent area, numerous national and state parks, natural areas, and hiking paths are open to the public. These range from a few trees in the middle of a city to a federally protected national park with miles of trails.

Not everyone understands the appeal of a simple walkabout in a forest. Besides being good for one's health, it helps to relieve stress, and few places are better for conversation: a quiet, secluded place with few worries or distractions.

"When I'm stressed out, I know I can always go for a hike to calm down and think," sophomore Tess Burgler said.

Walking is by no means the only use of a good forest. One can go there for a picnic, an unconventional date, or a game of Ultimate Frisbee. (This, incidentally, is more exciting with trees and other obstacles on the playing field.)

"I'm very interested in trees, and I don't much care for being around lots of people, so I spend a lot of time in the woods," junior Seth Messerly said.

Probably the best-known nature preserve in the area is the Cuyahoga Valley National Park. Formerly a National Recreation Area, the Valley has miles of hiking trails, equestrian paths, numerous rivers, streams, waterfalls and lakes, picnic areas, and 33,000 acres of largely unaffected natural space. Located near Peninsula, the Cuyahoga Valley is accessible by a 15-20 minute drive from Kent. Many students who enjoy more intensive outdoor activities such as multi-night backpacking and canoeing spend time at Cuyahoga Valley because it is the most secluded, best-preserved park in the Northeast Ohio area.

"The Valley's a good place to go when you have nothing to do, but your parents won't let you just do nothing," senior John Siefer said.

Closer to home and the comforts of civilization is Kent's Riveredge Park. Running straight through downtown, the park can most likely be found by any Kent resident with no difficulty. While the wilderness aspect may be lacking (due to the fact that it is surrounded by a city), it is nonetheless a good place to relax on a sunny day. An added bonus for history enthusiasts is the rich local heritage at Brady's Leap and the Williams Bros. Mill.

In the winter, Towner's Woods is arguably the best sledding location in the area. In the summer, it is an idyllic place to meander around in the shade of thousands of trees. A happy medium between the seclusion of the Cuyahoga Valley and downtown's Riveredge Park, Towner's Woods provides a place to take a moderately long quiet walk without the distinct possibility of getting lost. Located between Kent and Ravenna on Brady Lake Road, accessibility is not a problem for this local icon.

Wherever you go, you'll certainly enjoy the opportunity to spend some time outdoors and out of the everyday environment. And if you don't, you'll at least have the comfort of knowing that you wasted no money. That's more than can be said for most summer activities.

Towner's Woods in Franklin Township offers miles of trails such as this one for hiking and other uses.

Watch out Avril, here comes a true punk

Kutcher conquers MTV with new Punk'd

by Tessa Cortell

MTV, used to play music videos. This is a fact that the offspring commonly referred to as our generation has come to accept. The cable network's ongoing shift into a lifestyle network for 12 to 21-year olds continues this season with its promise of new "original" programming for the spring and summer. Great. More shows to distract viewers from the channel's lack of music.

I assumed that without a doubt, 99.9 percent of these shows would be insults to the human mind—more shows mirroring Diomedes with the promise of television that gets "down and dirty." Guess what? I was right! However, amongst the depths of teenage "sex, drugs, and rock n' roll" programming, one new show has premiered that retains its individuality.

Punk'd, headed by That 70s Show costar Ashton Kutcher, is a welcome departure from this latest run of "down and dirty" television. Kutcher is a lifesaver. Seeing that That 70s Show is in serious need of CPR, Kutcher jumped at the chance to create this prankster's dream of a television show.

The foundation of the show is simple. Kutcher, with the help of his friends (Dax, Al, and an 11 year-old kid named Ryan to mention a few) pulls pranks on celebrity friends and innocent civilians. The show is essentially a more modern version of Candid Camera for the rich and famous. Once a victim is "punk'd," he or she has the right to become the "punk" and "punk" someone else. And as we all know, revenge is sweet.

Mind you, this is not just three guys running around prank calling J-Lo.

Each prank is carefully planned out—a Mission Impossible for juvenile delinquents, if you will. Kutcher observes each attack through surveillance cameras and feeds lines to the punkees through wires and microphones. The show is a welcome return to other previous MTV shows, like the infamous Jackass, with one common attitude: screw the innocent.

Face it: watching celebrities get taken down drips with guilty pleasure. Justin Timberlake was not looking too happy as he cried, called his mom, and listened openmouthed as a "tax official" informed him that he had over $900,000 in unpaid back-taxes. Kelly Osbourne sat in silence (well, for awhile at least) as two "image consultants" paraded a Christina Aguilera-esque wardrobe in front of her and shared their ideas on getting her some new "moves" and creating a sexier image. Frankie Muniz, the 16-year old Malcolm in the Middle star, displayed his skill in gutter-speak when his one-of-a-kind $250,000 Porsche was stolen from a parking garage.

Following each punk, when Kutcher reveals himself, the most popular response is a charming "F*ck you!" (can I say that?). Punk'd airs new episodes on Monday nights at 10:30 on MTV, however reruns are shown non-stop throughout the week.

So, even though MTV refuses to show videos that extend beyond the 10 shown every afternoon at TRL—the same... 10... videos... (that's right, you heard me, Avril), it is still possible to find some kind of enjoyment in this channel. MTV, there is hope for you yet!

The Exies, The Early November, D4, Trouble Is Rising bands to check out this summer

by Amy Rogers

With summer comes free time, and what better way to spend that lazy Wednesday than by discovering a new band? There is a lot of rising talent just hovering below the line waiting to break the surface. Here are a few groups worth checking out even though a little searching may be required to find the albums. But hey, wasting time looking for a CD is the most effective way to spend a summer day, and as an added bonus...most CD stores are air conditioned!

THE EARLY NOVEMBER

Unlike the other bands listed here, The Early November has yet to record a full-length album, but their current EP, For All of This, blows the listener away from the first listen on. Although the EP has only eight songs, it holds the power of a full-length album due to the intensity of all the tracks, which as an added bonus are longer than an average track length. Early November's style can best be described as introspective and heartfelt as each track manages to strike a chord within the listener. The biggest failure here would be to pass these guys up due to the current image of emo-bands. Their talent is amazing as reflected by genius lyrics and unique progressive chords. These, when combined with Jeff Kummer's brilliant drumming, can bring a somewhat sedative song into life during performances until the audience is thrown into a decent sized and surprising mosh. Ace Enders' amazing vocal ability allows him to add a soothing tone to certain tracks, or a more nasal and attitude driven sound to others depending on the mood.

Standout Tracks: The opening track "Every Night's Another Story" starts out the album with a fast pace that gradually slows down and grows contemplative. "Come Back," track seven, helps close off the album on a more meditative note with its soft chorus pleading for a lover to "come back." Although the lyrical premise may sound simple and cliché, the music and tone is not and the track is bound to subconsciously haunt one's mind until you find yourself inadvertently humming "come back, come back to me now."

Where to Find It: For All of This will take some hunting to find. The best bet is to try local independently owned record stores. Even if they do not carry it, they will most likely be able to order it for you. It is very unlikely that one will come across this at a record chain, so if worse comes to worse, it is always available online either through Drive-Thru records or from online dealers such as Amazon.com.

the exies

The Exies second release, Inertia came out in January of 2003 but it is just now beginning to gain speed. The first single off the album "My Goddess," has been getting moderate play on some local alternative stations, but the band's talent is much more developed than the single would lead one to believe. The Exies have a unique style that is very organic while at the same time rock worthy. In concert, their combination of loud guitar riffs, intense lyrics, and strong stage presence makes for a mesmerizing show and captivated audience. They are a band full of contradictions, as the music manages to be loud and soft, intelligent but simple, and deep with lighter tracks. This is a true guitar rock band, as they prove throughout Inertia and on the stage.

Standout Tracks: "Creepin' Kamikaze," a reflexive slow track focused on self-forgiveness, and "Kickout," the Exies' next single. "Kickout's" catchy chorus and equally talented lyrics and composition make it an instantly addicting track but unfortunately also guarantees it will not get much play on mainstream radio.

Where to Find It: Available at most record stores for the low "newcomers" price of $9.99. If you like it, be sure to check out their smaller self-titled debut CD which can be ordered at small local record stores.

This band of punks share kindred music spirits with bands such as The Vines (sans the weed), and Black Rebel Motorcycle Club.

this is not to say that they are just another garage band, however. The refreshing part of D4 and what keeps them unique is that they add a more punkish and raucous sound to the typical garage band style that is now dominating the pages of every music magazine. Their sound is raw, fresh, and a nice throwback to the simplistic but genuine world of 60's rock.

roll. Yeah, so they do not offer any deep life-altering thoughts but that is half the fun of the album. These guys just want to rock, and that is exactly what they do.

Standout Tracks: The most prominent aspect of the album is how one can clearly hear D4's influences throughout it. "Come On," with its pulsing chords and steady snare, has a Rolling Stones feel to it with a bit of the Kingsmen mixed in. "Running on Empty" nicely follows up the opening brash track and is very reminiscent of The Kinks.

Where to Find It: D4's debut album, 6TwenTy, is available at most record stores ranging from $5.99 to $9.99. If you pay more, you need to start shopping for CDs somewhere else. Check it out now before these guys break onto the scene, because if the acclaim continues rising, that will happen soon as your pocket is going to get a lot lighter as the price will also rise.

TROUBLE IS

Upon reading lyrics or watching a Trouble Is show, one is first inclined to write them off as another band along the lines of Jimmy's Chicken Shack or at the very worst, due to their frankness on stage, Sum 41. However, the difference is that off the stage Trouble Is has depth. Though at times they may be upbeat and cheery, inviting their audience to just admit they want sex and alcohol, behind the act are three men who have experienced the rougher sides of life. Many of their songs deal with serious issues such as depression and suicide, just set to a self-deprecating lighter tone to remind listeners that sometimes life may suck, but all that matters is how you deal with it. Lead singer Luke Walker's voice is just right for Trouble Is' style: one part raw, one part sensual, and two parts attitude.

Standout Tracks: "Please Leave," possibly the first single off the album is a sarcastic look at life as a failure and with a chorus guaranteed to echo through one's head long after the song is over. "Graduation," a lighter emotionally relieving tune that although simplistic, still keeps the listener intrigued and humming along.

Where to Find It: Trouble Is' major record debut, Everything's a Problem, is not scheduled to hit stores until July 5th. However, free demo CDs are available at their shows, so if they hit Cleveland again, it is a price worth paying to see them. Walker also encourages fans and those interested to check out three free tracks available at Mp3.com.

Up! not exactly headed up

by Emily White

In 1997 Shania Twain's third CD Come On Over sold 34 million copies, making it the most successful female solo artist album in history.

However, five years later, it seems as though her new album Up! has room for improvement if it wants to match Up! to her last CD.

All 19 tracks on this album, released in late 2002, were co-written by Twain and her husband/producer Robert John "Mutt" Lange.

Although Twain has always been classified in both pop and country categories, it seems as though this CD fits more into the pop category. Of the tracks, only three display any connection with the country music world.

"It doesn't sound very country-like, but at least she's hot," freshman Craig Butler said.

Twain's music has a certain style, which has obviously worked in the past since she has won many awards for her other three records. However, one would think that she would stray a little away from the familiar and try some different things on her fourth album.

"All her songs are very similar, but they are still upbeat," junior Lubna Najjar said.

Up! sounds like any other Twain CD. For example the song "Nah!" sounds almost exactly like the song "Any Man of Mine" which was from her second CD.

"Although this is a good CD, it sounds just like all her other CD's," senior Erin McKinney said.

None of the songs on the CD really show off Twain's vocals. There are only three slow ballads on the album and even on those songs there is not much sign of a great voice. The song "It Only Hurts When I'm Breathing" is really the only one that displays her vocal abilities, but even then her vocals are not as strong as in the past.

Although there is not a variety of fast and slow songs, the tracks still sound typical of Twain; however, there are a couple songs which provide some new sounds. Songs like "Ka-Ching" (which has a N+Sync feeling to it), "In My Car (I'll Be the Driver)," and "Waiter Bring Me Water" have up-beat, silly lyrical tempos to them, while the song "Juanita" offers a style of salsa gone wrong.

The two songs that have been released on the pop and country stations are "I'm Gonna Getcha" and "Up!" They have been doing well despite the same recycled Twain sound.

"I give 'Up' a nine for dance quality and an eight for fun!" RHS teacher Mary Ann Costa said.

Another factor that is missing from this CD is feeling. All the songs sound a little whiny and have a "blah" emotion.

"This CD makes me wonder where her fan base is," senior Jessica Murphy said.

Simple Plan

How long will they last?

by Stacy Evans

I first heard Simple Plan at the Blink182 and Green Day concert in June of 2002. They played on the Times Stage at Blossom Music Center before the concert started. The group was out mingling with the crowd before they went on stage. When I saw that, I figured these guys must be down to earth and into getting and keeping fans.

Simple Plan released their debut CD titled No pads, No helmets...Just balls on March 19, 2002. Simple Plan became more widely known near the beginning of 2003, with their hit single "I'd Do Anything" playing on radio stations across the country as well as on MTV.

Simple Plan's music style is closely related to pop and punk. The band looks punk, but their music can at times be a bit more on the poppier side such as in the songs "I'd Do Anything" and "Addicted". Lead singer Pierre Bouvier's voice may seem whiny and high pitched at times, but can drop to a lower octave in slower songs such as "Perfect".

"[Simple Plan is] just another punk rock boy band with half decent songs and a bad lead singer," sophomore Jim Ewers said.

Lyrics in Simple Plan's songs may not apply to everyone all the time, but apply to everyone at some point in his or her high school life. "Perfect" is a song dealing with a teenager not feeling good enough for the people he cares about. In other songs, the lyrics speak of being a kid and just dealing with everyday problems such as friends, boredom, and loneliness.

"Some songs are decent, but others really suck," freshman Billy Hughes said.

"[Their music is] not bad, but too much like pop music," sophomore Jenna Bialik said.

Even if one does not care for the lyrics or voices of the band, it would be hard for him or her to not get the music stuck in their head. The music is catchy and attracts attention to the bass and the unusual musical tones during the rhythm breaks.

"I thought the songs were okay until I heard they were going on tour with Avril Lavigne. Then I stopped liking them," senior Pat Moore said.

With a new single out and one already a hit, it is almost absolute that this group is going somewhere. But how long will they be around?

Mystery, suspense...sand?

Best books to read on beach

by Kori Frazier

Imagine relaxing at the ocean on a beach bathed in sunlight, the waves crashing onto the warm sand and seagulls flying through the blue summer sky. What could make this scene even more perfect? That is right—a good book! What follows are four great suggestions for books to read on the beach!

The Blind Assassin

by Margaret Atwood

Ten days after the war ended, my sister Laura drove a car off a bridge." With this simple, yet striking beginning, Margaret Atwood begins her recent Booker Prize winning bestseller The Blind Assassin, a gripping tale of two women and the experiences and people who change them forever. The book is centered around the life of high society wife Iris Chase Griffen and opens with an account of her sister Laura's suicide. However, there is far more to Iris's story than the events leading up to Laura's tragic death. Through this ambitious novel within a novel, readers gradually become aware of the shocking secrets, betrayals, and deception that plague Iris's family. Though the 300 plus page book takes some work to get through, its ultimate conclusion is extremely fulfilling, as Iris's greatest secret and the true relationships between Atwood's complex characters are finally brought to light.

The Songcatcher

by Sharyn McCrumb

Best known for her novels developed around the culture and history of the Appalachian Mountains, Sharyn McCrumb's latest work tells the history of the McCourry family, who over the course of three centuries experiences the great power that music holds over man. As folk singer Lark McCourry travels back to her home in Tennessee to visit her dying father, she searches for a folk song she heard as a child, one that can only be found by tracing it back to her family's roots in Scotland. The novel also flashes back to mid-1700s to chronicle the lives of other long dead relatives who carry the story and secrets of the song. While the historical content of the novel may be a turn-off for those looking for purely escapist reading, McCrumb's distinctive writing style coupled with the novel's intriguing characters and surprisingly suspenseful plot make The Songcatcher a novel that cannot be put down.

The Bean Trees

by Barbara Kingsolver

This Poisonwood Bible author's debut novel may be a quick read for most, but despite its brevity, The Bean Trees offers a unique look at life to anyone who has even longed to be on his or her own. When Kentucky native Taylor Greer sets out for nowhere in particular after graduating from high school, she is looking for freedom, independence, and to avoid the life of pregnancy and commitment that is traditional for young women in her hometown. However, she ends up getting far more than she bargained for. When she finds a three-year-old American Indian girl abandoned near a bar in Oklahoma, Taylor finds herself thrust into the instant motherhood that she left home to escape and sets off to build a life for her and her adopted daughter. As a result, she finds a new home, friendships, and lessons about life and family that could not have been learned elsewhere. Kingsolver's intriguing plot coupled with her occasionally humorous characters make the novel a must read for anyone who has had his or her life take a surprising turn or has had to fight for something he or she believes in. Those who like The Bean Trees may enjoy Pigs in Heaven, the novel's compelling sequel.

The Hours

by Michael Cunningham

Film fans that enjoyed last year's Oscar winning movie The Hours will find that its plot and characters deviate little from the novel on which it was based. Set in three different time periods with a different cast of characters in each, the book chronicles a day in the lives of three women, a day that will ultimately change each of them forever. The common thread between the stories is Virginia Woolf's classic novel Mrs. Dalloway, which touches each character in a significant way. However, as the three central characters, including Woolf herself, experience the internal conflicts, frustrations, and challenges the day presents them with, the reader discovers a deeper connection between them that lies in their life experiences and the way their lives have impacted each other. While the novel can be viewed as a tribute to Woolf and even emulates her writing style at times, the book provides a valuable message about one's relationships with those around him and the impact one person has on the lives of so many others.

"I became very emotionally involved with The Hours. I didn't want it to end—it made me want to know what happened to the characters later on in their lives," Roosevelt teacher Mary Ann Costa said.

UNDERCLASSMEN SPEAKOUT: What do you leave to the seniors?

compiled by Anna Springer

Freshman:

Billy Hughes, Jake Ferlito, Jacob Vanags: To Chris Chandler - we leave you the title of being the "freshmen savior."

Natalie Borland, Annie Mackintosh, Grace Hefferan: To Chris Chandler - Keep playing lacrosse, you're awesome. To all: invite us to some freakin' parties.

Dania Barazi: To Rudi - I'll miss you. It'll be different without you.

Taryn Vidic, Jeanise Johnson: Good luck, have fun, you made our freshman year cool. Robbie - Whats up?

Tiffany Stacey: I hope you enjoy college, Sanjeeb. A whole new field of girls *wink wink.* Kevin - thanks for being the civil member of the debate team.

Laura Gregory, Alex Stanton: We love you Jimmy.

Sophomores:

Steve Skok: A couch to burn.

Caleb Schjeldahl: Steve Skok's finger.

Stephanie Rericha: No more high school... lucky.

Dave Swartz: The freshmen need to leave, not the seniors.

Veronica Joiner: Holla!

Ashley Parsons: Thanks for going putt-putting.

Kelly Brunswick: Party on, homies.

Patricia Dionne: Locked doors so ya'll don't come back.

Katie Lentz: The ability to sleep in later.

Nate Rutzky: To Philip Marken - I leave his speedo, his boots, and his knee socks from the Columbus hockey tournament. To Matt Sargeant - A broken mailbox.

Khalil Najjar: To Demherd - My name isn't Catch!

Andrew Lewis: Urinal cakes.

John Miller: The memory of Momtchil getting a swirly.

Ashley Cope and Alyssa Dolbow: Ross - Who is it?

Alyssa Dolbow: To Jenna and Seaira - Thanks for the great year. I'll miss you and I love you.

Nick Darrah: Freshmen fifteen.

Juniors:

Glynn Ward: Forever disrespect for authority.

Kaitlin Gentry, Jen Sepi, Brittany Deluke, Kenzie Shay, and sophomore Leanne Grimes: NSB.

Ben Childers: Tom Yaniglos.

Tom Yaniglos: Ben Childers.

Becky Ridinger: Rachel - Jamela's obsession with Mr. Terrel.

Jennie White: The I'm gonna fly away now orchestra dresses.

Jacqueline Kordinak: Coach Carl's cologne.

Brittany Solitro: Wael - stop stalking me.

Ali Borland: Kelly - you're my lova.

Keely Spencer: Conor - I'll always have a few points saved for you.

Karra Chuinard: Tanya (AKA my butt.)

Scott Habowski: No option, senior exams, senior projects.

Trevor Williams: That a good culture will survive.

Max Lavrentovich: A conscience.

Top 10 greatest movie soundtracks

by Tessa Cortell

The music makes the movie. Would the bill scene from The Sound of Music have been as uplifting without the soprano styling of Julie Andrews? Would Russell Crowe have appeared as valiant in Gladiator minus the orchestral compositions that accompanied the tiger-fighting scenes? Of course not. Below is a compilation (in no particular order) of my choices for the Top 10 best/classic movie soundtracks (disregarding old musicals and war movies) of our entertainment-driven generation.

Almost Famous

Remember when musicians actually played instruments? And when the word "rock" was not automatically followed by Blink 182 or Avril Lavigne? Along with such films as High Fidelity, Almost Famous captures the true mood, attitude, and environment that is consistent with the rock and roll experience. The soundtrack contains a mixture of classic (good) rock, such as Led Zeppelin, Simon and Garfunkel, Lynyrd Skynyrd, and Cat Stevens. The soundtrack also features an original song created by the film's fictional band Stillwater. Okay, if a fictional band can play their own instruments, what does that say about you, Avril?

Rocky Horror Picture Show

This choice should not even have to be explained. The movie is amazing, thus the soundtrack is equally amazing. For those unfamiliar with the film, the soundtrack is sung almost entirely by cross-dressing men in RuPaul make-up and show-girl attire. With songs like "I'm Just a Sweet Transvestite" and "Touch-a, Touch-a, Touch me," who would not want to own this cross-dressing cabaret?

Moulin Rouge

I know I shunned musicals in the intro, but come on. This soundtrack is great, not only due to the impressive vocals of Nicole Kidman and Ewan McGregor (both first-time singers), but also the adaptations of the previous artists' works. Where else can you find Madonna's "Like a Virgin" sung as a show tune or The Police's "Roxanne" performed as a tango by a narcoleptic Bohemian?

Empire Records

Oh Remy, you're soo sexy! The soundtrack to Empire Records is extremely well-rounded, containing more contemporary and well-known artists, like The Cranberries and Gin Blossoms, some high-energy 80s-early 90s songs, like "Video Killed the Radio Star," and even some mellow Dire Straits. The album also contains a pre-"Chicago" Renee Zellweger singing "Sugarhigh."

Now and Then

Avert your eyes, men—this one is for the ladies! This soundtrack has gone down as a classic among classics for girls everywhere. We all love the fluffy, sentimental plot of the movie (for many, it was an instant favorite at age 10, along with Babysitter's Club Movie), and the soundtrack follows the same lines, swimming in carefree, poppy oldies. "Knock Three Times," anyone?

Fight Club

Fight Club is immaculate as a book, as a film, and as a soundtrack. Game, set, match. The film's powerful subject matter transcends through to the soundtrack with just as much strength and energy. The soundtrack is composed solely by the Dust Brothers in a vocal-free style resembling that of the Chemical Brothers or Moby (prior to Gwen Stefani). The soundtrack strengthens the film as a whole; however, it is equally as strong by itself. Plus... Fight Club could kick the crap out of the Breakfast Club.

The Wedding Singer

Admit it. The soundtrack far surpassed the movie and you know it. The soundtrack is great—a wonderful tribute to the 80s and all of its hair-sprayed glory. The album covers the fundamentals of solo male musicians, Elvis Costello, David Bowie, and Billy Idol to name a few, and tosses in the Sugarhill Gang and an Adam Sandler original entitled "Somebody Kill Me Please." That alone qualifies it for a spot on this list.

Romeo and Juliet

Despite the fact that the actor playing Romeo had a nickname like "Leo," Romeo and Juliet was a well-made film, however its soundtrack is partly responsible for this. It is hard to imagine Romeo and Juliet being performed while accompanied, not by a stage orchestra, but by the Butthole Surfers, Garbage, Everclear, and Radiohead. And, even though it was Leo DeCaprio, I still melt when I hear Des'ree's "Kissing You." Cue a smile and a sigh!

The Breakfast Club

Ah, the Brat-pack days. While "Don't You Forget About Me" was the signature hit off of this album, other underrated gems, like "Fire in the Twilight" and "Heart Too Hot to Hold" make the soundtrack a polished masterpiece. Most songs contain an infectious, high-energy feel that resonates with the film's time period. The "Love Theme" instrumental will strike a chord with anyone who has seen the movie—aw, tear!

Nightmare Before X-mas

I had to put this on here. No question about it. Think back to your younger years—it is almost impossible to not recall dancing around the house, happily belting out tunes from this Claymation Christmas from hell. It was Marilyn Manson's Christmas, and we loved it. As a quick memory jog, the soundtrack's highlights include "This is Halloween," "What's This?," "Jack's Lament," and "Making Christmas."

New head coach, stricter rules

Men's baseball wins big

by Lauren Antognoli

Pitcher senior James Patti squints into the midday sun, his fist clutching a baseball behind his back. A Stow batter wipes sweat from his brow, shifts his grip on the bat, and digs a cleat into the dirt. Patti's fastball whizzes past the batter's empty swing and buries itself into catcher senior Nick Yoder's mitt with a satisfying thwack.

"Strike three, you're out!" The umpire calls. Cheers radiate from the RHS stands as the Rough Riders jog off the field to begin a new inning.

Action like this has been prevalent at every RHS baseball game this season. As the wins increase, so does the team's confidence.

"We've been excelling as the season goes on," junior designated hitter Dustin DeVincentis said.

"I motivate the players mainly through building confidence," he said. "This is done by physical and mental preparation. If they know they have the tools to succeed, then they will."

Haney was promoted to head coach this year after being the varsity assistant for two years under former head coach Joseph Shaw. He explained why he loves being a coach.

"Coaching and teaching are my passions," Haney said. "I have coached and played baseball at high levels for most of my life. I love the challenge that the game creates and passing on my knowledge. Being the assistant for the past two years has allowed us to make a smooth transition. The players are very familiar with me and my expectations."

Haney explained those expectations that help prepare the team both on and off the field.

"We've instilled a pretty successful weight room program," he said. "We've hit the books pretty hard (program GPA 3.175). And most importantly, we stress class and knowledge. Always learn, always show class."

While the team may have class, they have their weaknesses. Many of the players are young and inexperienced.

"There are a lot of sophomores on the varsity team," senior and team co-captain Spencer Payne said.

But while the players may be young, their talent shines when on the field.

"We have great leadership and a determination to learn and improve," Haney said. "We've created a pride in ourselves, this game, and our school. This allows us to always compete with whoever is in the other dugout. This team flat-out works and learns."

One can see that the team's hard work has paid off just by watching them play. During the game against Stow on April 29, a lineup of strong hitters helped RHS rack up the points. After walking Yoder, DeVincentis, and junior Kevin Haley and pitching two RBIs to Patti and junior Ray L. Wilkins, the opposing pitcher retired to the dugout and a different pitcher took his place. Later in the game, juniors co-captain Jessie Michel and Ryan Hunter scored as Yoder and Patti crushed the ball.

Pitching ranks among the many strengths of the team. Not only does Patti rule the mound, but Payne, seniors Ron Goodspeed and Vincent Barholt, and sophomore Ryan Hunter pitch as well.

"When we pitch well, we play really good defense," senior and team co-captain Yoder commented.

The team's record advanced to 9-10 on April 29 after defeating rival Stow. Haney described the pride he felt.

"We played one of our best games of the year at Stow but lost. But we came back and played flawlessly the next day at home and beat them 9-4," he said.

Since the games can last over two hours each, the Rough Riders need plenty to pump them up before games.

"We listen to Bone [Thugs & Harmony]," Yoder said. "And OAR, too."

PLAYER PROFILE: SPENCER PAYNE

National Honor Society member, great student, excellent basketball and baseball player: Spencer Payne does it all. This senior co-captain and pitcher plays with heart, determination, and spirit.

"He's a class kid that works hard in all facets of life: family, school, baseball," head coach Mike Haney said. "He's one of the hardest workers and most inspiring young men I've been able to work with."

Payne's talent and diligence is recognized by his teammates.

"He leads by example and gets the job done in a clutch," senior teammate Austin Kotting said.

"He's a solid all-around player," junior second baseman Kevin Haley added.

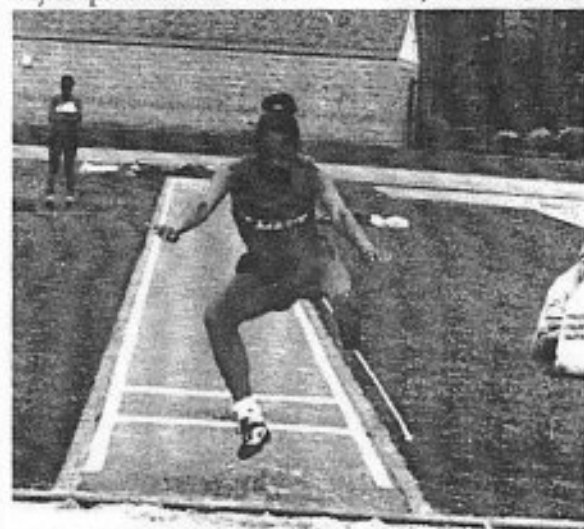

Payne has a look of intensity while on the field. Crouched and ready in his third base position, he is always ready to field a grounder, catch a fly, or race to tag out an opposing runner.

Haney sees room for improvement: "He needs to 'smile' more!" he said.

Women's track racing for victory

by Kori Frazier

For many students, running around a track, leaping over hurdles, and throwing discs across a field may not sound like an ideal way to spend time after school. However, for 25 female athletes at Roosevelt, these activities are a way of life. Despite having a small team, several injured players, and a new first year coach, the women's track and field team is prepared to handle these challenges to pave the way for a successful season.

New head coach Scott Sabino is joined by assistant coaches Alissa Kluber and Kevin Hockett. Previously, Sabino held jobs in Aurora and Kirtland schools as a baseball coach, but this season marks his inaugural year working with track and field. Sabino has a number of goals for not only the team, but himself as well.

"I want to help them learn about the sport in general as well as them as athletes. I look forward to imparting my knowledge of track, as well as helping them learn good personal values and work ethic," Sabino said.

"As coaches, we want the girls to have fun and enjoy themselves in their events, but we want to focus on them individually and help them become students of the sport as well," Kluber said. "So many coaches just give direction to athletes without explaining to them what they are doing. We really want to help them and let them know how our direction is going to help them as athletes."

With a current Western Reserve Conference (WRC) record of two wins and six losses, the team is working to build a strong work ethic and a winning tradition. While the team itself is small compared to larger track programs at other area schools, Kluber and Sabino both agree that size does not matter in Roosevelt's team. The team possesses a number of strong athletes competing in a variety of events, with key leadership provided by seniors Lauren Sloan and Emily White, juniors Kari Lillibridge and Lubna Najjar, and freshman Taryn Vidic.

"Due to the individual nature of track, it is difficult to single out just a few individuals as instrumental. Everyone has made progress and they all work extremely hard," Sabino said.

"For the number of players we have, our season is going really well. We may be a small team, but we manage to work really hard and compete and do well," Vidic said.

Both Sabino and the athletes were quick to point out a number of strengths they have in competition. According to many students, the team's strong sense of unity and the strength of team members make them successful.

"We have a lot of team support from everyone. Our teammates encourage us and make everyone feel good about themselves. We also help to keep each other in shape!" sophomore Phylcia Gawa said.

"We have a great group of kids. Because we have never coached at Roosevelt before, both Scott and I are new to them, but they and the sport are new to us as well. We have strong, experienced players who have talent in all areas of competition. Everyone has made progress and they all work extremely hard," Kluber said.

However, the team's budding success has not come without a sacrifice, in particular the loss of key players. Senior Jodi Hensel, as well as last year's state high jump champion junior Ali Borland, have both been sidelined this season due to injuries. While this would appear to be a grave loss to the team, they have dealt well with Hensel and Borland's absences, which have also given other athletes an opportunity to make their own achievements.

"When you lose players who can win like Jodi and Ali, it really has an effect on the team. However, it forces us to find other ways to achieve. Some of our new players have stepped up to fill the holes they left and are scoring and that has helped the loss of those players a lot," Kluber said.

"We have a lot of talent, but a lack of depth is definitely a weakness. With so many events, it is really important to have solid players who can fill as many events as possible," White said.

Currently, the team is preparing for their upcoming WRC tournament as well as key competitions against rival high school teams Cuyahoga Falls and Ravenna.

"[WRC] is where we are going to find out where we are as far as athletics and where we stand competitively," sophomore Rosalyn Dale said.

"Our main goal is definitely to go to states this year. It's important to keep our team together and keep having confidence in ourselves," Najjar said.

PLAYER PROFILE: LAUREN SLOAN

by Kori Frazier

From actress to outstanding student to community volunteer, senior Lauren Sloan fills many roles. However, one of her most important is that of a strong leader and athlete on Roosevelt's women's track team. According to head coach Scott Sabino, Sloan plays a pivotal role on the team due to her experience and dedication.

"Lauren is a hard worker and talented athlete with strong commitment to the team," Sabino said.

"When I hear Lauren Sloan's name, three words come to mind: dedication, commitment, and hard work," sophomore Phylcia Gawa said.

Sloan said that her favorite things about participating in track are the physical benefits of running and the feeling of accomplishment it gives her.

"Running feels good. There is something very satisfying about finishing a long run or workout. During the two weeks I take off from running every year I feel disgusting," Sloan said.

Sloan's major contributions to the team's success include scoring points in a variety of individual events, which include the 200, 400, and 4 x 8. Sloan has a number of goals including qualifying for the regionals, keeping the team together, and continuing the team's tradition of excellence.

While Sloan will graduate this spring, her running career is far from over. She will attend Malone College in Canton, OH, this fall majoring in Psychology and has already committed to run for Malone's track team. However, she hopes that the RHS team will have longevity, as well as continue their current success in the years to come.

"Before picking up a stick or ball next year, consider joining the track team," Sloan said. "If nothing else, you will probably be in the best shape of your life!"

Small team still successful

Team unity contribute to men's track

by Emily White

Depth. That word is missing from the description of this year's men's track team. However, despite small numbers, they are still going strong.

"We need more distance runners and field event participants," coach Jim Fox said.

In order to beat their rival teams such as Hudson, Stow, Solon, and Cuyahoga Falls, members of the team are important and needed.

"Everyone is a contributor, from the freshmen all the way up to the seniors. Everyone helps in some way," junior Chris Banks said.

"Robbie Wright, Sam Perkins, Raasan Wahid, Chris Banks all kick butt in the 4 by 4. Dan Dorman rocks the high jump. Zach Wunderle is the ironman of the team. And Chad Palmer brings comedy and is an excellent singer," sophomore Chad Palmer said of himself and fellow teammates.

Because of the small teams, some sprinters, such as Palmer, are forced to run some of the distance events, which are not their specialties.

"Things like that make this team so special; they are willing to try new things to help out their team," senior Zach Wunderle said.

The leaders for the small team are the seniors, in particular co-captains senior Jabari Dortch and Wunderle who have both ran track for four years.

"They've earned the right to be leaders because they have worked so hard for those four years to get where they are," Banks said.

A particular strength of this year's team is the 4 by 400 meter relay. Members of the relay, Robbie Wright, Banks, Sam Perkins, and Raashan Wahid, have their eyes set on a bid to the state meet.

According to Fox, some other goals of the team are for the high jump to also go to state along with finishing near the top of the Western Reserve Conference. In order to place high in the conference, hard work and dedication are needed every day at practice; which is just what these guys give.

"Everyday practices are intense. If you don't work hard in practice, you won't have that intensity when it's time to race," Banks said.

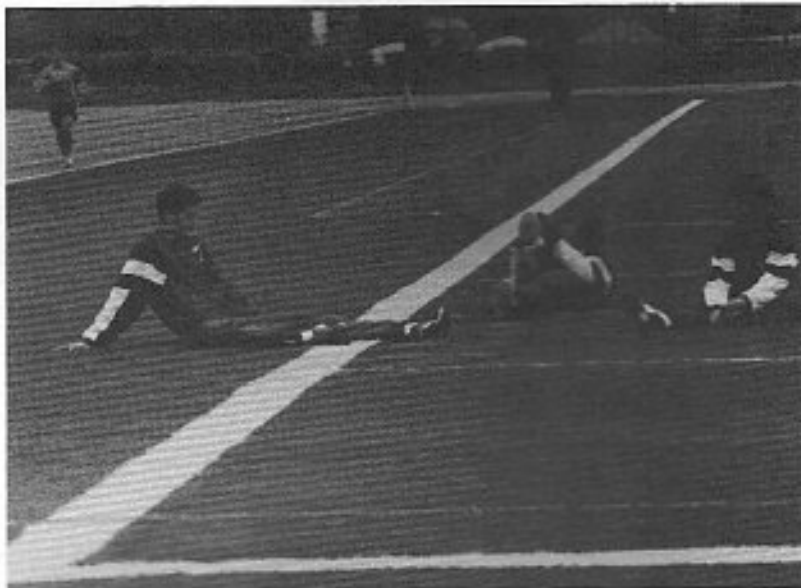

A sense of team unity arises through the intense workouts.

"This is the closest our track team has ever been. We watch each others' races and cheer on our teammates," Wunderle said.

According to Fox, the team is doing "not bad," so far in the season. And although the team is not yet at what is considered their "peak," they feel they are right where they need to be.

"We are doing well and when we hit our peak we will do even better," senior Mark Robison said.

"We've had our ups and downs but we're working hard everyday and trying our best," Palmer said.

PLAYER PROFILE: ZACH WUNDERLE

by Emily White

As the end of his senior season approaches, Zach Wunderle hopes that his hard work will finally pay off and he will be able to accomplish his goals for his best event, the 3200 meter run. The goals are to place top 3 in the conference in the WRC, make it to regionals, and to break 10 minutes.

Wunderle has been a member of the track and cross-country team for four years and was named captain of both teams his senior year. He also participated in bowling, serving as co-captain his senior year.

Wunderle made it to the state meet in cross-country his senior year and with his teammates in bowling his junior year.

When asked to describe Wunderle, Fox said that he is a "leader."

"Zach is a hard worker and he's very encouraging to the younger members of the track team," sophomore Chad Palmer said.

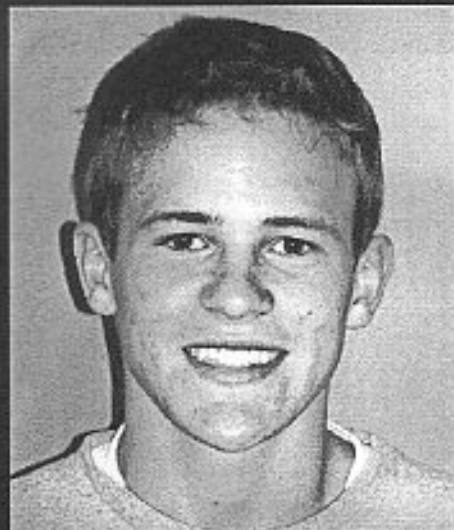

One of Zach's favorite things about track are the friendships that he has made.

"I enjoy coming to practice everyday to work hard and run with my friends," Wunderle said. "I am sad that this is my last season because I will miss running with my teammates."

As for running in college, Wunderle had to make some decisions between running at Mount Union University, Ohio University, and Ohio State University.

"I am going to Ohio State next year and I am going to walk on the cross country and track teams," Wunderle said.

2002/2003

by Christopher Battles

The following senior athletes have been chosen by their coaches as "Unsung Heroes" for the 2002-03 sports year. Each coach was given the option to nominate a senior, and the following represent those who chose a player. These players may have not gotten the recognition they deserved for their efforts, but with their hard work, determination, and positive attitudes, they have definitely won the respect of their coaches and teammates.

Men's Track - Zach Wunderle

As a fourth-year member of the men's track team, Wunderle has proved the important leadership necessary to help out his first-year coach Jim Fox. As a distance runner, he is also one of the main impact players on the team, giving the Riders a strong force in that area. Wunderle competes in the mile, two-mile, and on the 4x800 meter relay teams. Fox praises Wunderle's work ethic, toughness, and commitment to the team.

"He has given everything he has without a lot of fanfare," Fox said.

Women's Soccer - Lisa Smeiles

Smeiles has contributed many of the intangibles that have helped the women's soccer team this year. Despite statistics that did not reflect her average, the third-year letter winner has been a clutch playmaker and a significant leader on the team. She helped lead the team to a 3-2 WRC record and third place overall in the WRC South. At the season's end, she was also honored as a First Team WRC selection for her efforts.

"Lisa's positive attitude, tireless work ethic, and dedication to her team reflects her overall character," head coach Eric Morgan said.

Football - Matt Hayes

Winning a football game is not just about offenses and defenses. Special teams, such as kick-offs and field goal units, are also a very important part of the game plan, one that many times can mean the difference between a win and a loss. Hayes has been an integral leader on this unit for the Rough Riders this year. He also has contributed as a wide receiver and defensive back.

"He is a dedicated and enthusiastic individual and a team player," head coach Ed Becker said. "He has shown strong senior leadership and has really gotten the most out of his ability."

Wrestling - Will Ullinger

When members of this year's wrestling team needed a role model, they turned to Ullinger. As a four-year member of the team and a starting wrestler in the heavyweight division, Ullinger has been a large inspiration for the team. He also was an important factor in the team's 12-4 record this year. Coach Wes Murphy pointed to Will's personality and dedication to the sport as reasons for his success.

"Will is so dedicated, he had the fiercest diet on the team," senior wrestler Kevin Peck said. "He cut his meal total in half...to only four per day."

Unsung Sports Heroes

Women's Lacrosse -

Kelly Morrow & Erin Casagrande

Women's lacrosse coach Christy Mitchell could not choose just one of her players, so she decided to choose both Casagrande and Morrow. Both girls play defense and have been playing lacrosse since their freshman year. Both have been important parts of the team's winning record this year. Mitchell was adamant in her praises of both girls.

"Erin and Kelly have led the team to great unity," she said. "They are great examples, leaders and players; their effort, dedication, and talent on the field has been a huge part of our success."

Women's Basketball -

Yangar Cooper

One of the key traits of an unsung hero is leadership by example. As a third-year forward on the basketball team, Cooper has truly inspired her fellow teammates to play at the best of their abilities.

"Yangar led by example through her tenacious play," head coach Anne Hunkele said. "She is a very unselfish player who cared about the team's success rather than personal glory."

Cooper put all of her talent and effort towards the well being of the team, something that Hunkele is very proud of.

"Yangar is an Unsung Hero because while she did not receive (nor seek) personal recognition, she did everything possible to help her team's success," Hunkele said.

Baseball - Don Goodspeed

There are some athletes who want to be playing when the stakes are the highest, when the pressure is the worst. As a third-year pitcher on the varsity team, Goodspeed is one of those players.

"Don always wants the ball," coach Mike Haney said. "He loves pitching against our toughest competition."

This season Goodspeed has been forced into an important role due to injuries, but he has excelled at every opportunity despite the tough games in which he has to pitch. Haney praised his leadership and competitive spirit.

"Don is a leader in his actions on the field. Don always finds a way to win," Haney said.

Women's Swimming - Aimee Costdyk

Costdyk, a four-year team member, has been achieving goals all season, both for the team and herself. A competitor in the 100m breaststroke, she helped lead the team to an overall 7-8 record, with a 2-2 record in the WRC. Head coach James Hunt appreciated Costdyk's dedication to the team and described her as a catalyst.

"She dedicated herself to swimming by working extremely hard," Hunt said. "She kept her goals in mind and accomplished them. Her aggressiveness spread through the team, and she really helped the younger swimmers along."

Softball- Amanda Mullett

Mullett started her second year on the varsity team this year, but it was a whole different experience. In order to fit into the team's fielding configuration, Mullett had to switch from third base to first, learning a totally new position. The transition was flawless, and Mullett has blossomed as a solid leader on the team.

"Amanda has worked hard to learn her new position," coach Caroline Loomer said. "She has also matured into a positive influence and leader on the team."

Mullett has made the greatest impact this season at the plate, where she has been a consistent offensive threat and a clutch hitter.

"She has been solid offensively and has had many key hits with runners in scoring position," Loomer said. "I would consider her one of the best first basemen in the WRC."

Strong coaching ability, speed, trustworthiness Women's lacrosse focuses on confidence, strengths

by Katie Calvin

Women's lacrosse began as a club in 2000 and started competing in 2001. Word about the sport spread throughout the school and many girls became interested.

"I think that people were looking for a good contact sport to play in the spring," coach Kristy Mitchell said.

This year women's lacrosse started their season strong despite being a younger team. As of May 8, the team record was seven wins, three losses, and one tie with approximately three tournaments remaining in the season.

Some of the team's strengths this year are strong coaching ability, speed, playing like a team, and trustworthiness. Although the team has many strengths, their weakness is that they are still learning the sport.

In comparison to last year, the team has improved their skills and conquered teams that have beaten them in the past. "[We would like to] keep improving, winning, and to finish the year strong," Mitchell said.

The lacrosse team's hardest competition has been Hudson. The girls plan to overcome the Hudson Explorers as well as any other team they lead together and help the team to play like a team. With only two losses this year, the girls are hoping to end the season well.

face with confidence.

"We're not going to go out [on the field] thinking that we're a first year team," Mitchell said. "We're going to go out and match their skill."

Along with confidence, good leadership keeps the team playing well.

"I think that without leadership you can't have a positive season. You really need people who will give it their all every single day," junior Jen Sepi said.

Two people on the team who show strong leadership skills are the team captains, seniors Kelly Morrow and Brin Casagrande.

"Both girls show good leadership and defensive skills," Mitchell said. "They lead together and help the team to play like a team."

"I think that the season will end very well. We're doing very good this year and we've come together well," Sepi said.

"As long as we continue to practice and work well as a team, our season is going to be great," sophomore Jenna Bialik said.

PLAYER PROFILE:

KELLY MORROW

Senior Kelly Morrow began playing lacrosse during her sophomore year of high school because she thought it "looked like fun." Two years later, she is a co-captain of the team and plays defense.

"Kelly is a good player. She's nice and makes the mood lighter and more comfortable," sophomore Jenna Bialik said.

Over the course of this season, Morrow feels that she has improved on her communication and doubling skills.

"[As a team] we have improved so much and it's been fun," Morrow said.

Morrow also plays field hockey, a sport that she has lettered in along with lacrosse. She plans to continue to play field hockey when she attends Kent State University in the fall.

"[Kelly is good at] checking on defense, accountability, and leadership," coach Kristy Mitchell said.

"She's a great leader, a good team player, and she picks up the team," senior co-captain Brin Casagrande said.

"Kelly is a funny person. She is a key player and I don't know what we'd do without her," junior Jen Sepi said.

Roosevelt player Kim Martin attempts to catch a pass as junior Jamie Morrow looks on.

PLAYER PROFILE:

BRIN CASAGRANDE

Senior Brin Casagrande began playing lacrosse during her freshman year because it was a new sport in Kent and she thought she would try it out.

"Her attitude is always awesome. She never complains and she's a great leader," coach Kristy Mitchell said.

Along with lacrosse, Casagrande is also involved in her church youth group. She plans to attend at Ohio University, majoring in either physical or occupational therapy. She would like to play intramural lacrosse.

This season Casagrande's goal is to have fun and she feels that she has accomplished this.

"We've improved 100 percent. The coaches are really dedicated, and everyone gets along," Casagrande said.

"Brin gets along with everyone. She is a key leader and she is always positive about what the team does," junior Jen Sepi said.

"Brin is a really great person and player. I really look up to and admire her leadership and enthusiasm," sophomore Chelsea Moyseenko said.
